Senate Votes 36 to 28 To Keep Rent Curbs; House Debates Today

Measure Continues Control to Dec. 31; Opponents See End Of Ceilings in 1951

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

By a vote of 36 to 28, the Senate yesterday agreed to continue Federal rent controls through 1950 and give local communities authority to extend them another six months beyond that.

The measure now goes to the House, which is scheduled to open debate at noon today. House sentiment has been regarded as more closely divided than that in the Senate, but even Republican opponents of the measure now acknowledge that the odds are in favor of House acceptance of the compromise bill.

House Speaker Sam Rayburn (D., Tex) told reporters that even in advance of the Senate action he had assured President Truman the House would approve the bill, which is considerably less than the President had demanded.

Two Main Reasons Given

House members ascribe the sudden shift in sentiment in favor of the measure to two main reasons:

1. This is an election year and even most Republicans from large cities still under rent control will hesitate to vote against it.

2. Most members of Congress believe rent control is still needed in the District of Columbia, but even though in voting to continue controls here Congress would be acting as a local council, members feel a vote for District of Columbia rent control would be hard to justify to the voters if all Federal controls were lifted.

In addition, the compromise bill is in effect so mild as compared with what the Administration originally sought that it has drawn much of the vehemence from the opposition.

Most of those most vehemently opposed to continuation of wartime controls believe the bill introduced by Chairman Brent Spence (D., Ky.) of the House Banking and Currency Committee in effect will really end Federal controls in six months anyway and slam the gate on attempts at further continuation.

The House Rules Committee already has given the green light for the bill, providing for one hour of debate on the rule and three hours on the measure itself.

The measure went through the Senate without an amendment. Informed House sources say there will be a determined drive to amend the measure to make it clear that Rent Control Administrator Tighe E. Woods will have no power to recontrol any area he has decontrolled.

Woods has testified that under the present measure he does not now believe he has any such power, but GOP lawmakers are said to be anxious to spell this out in the law.

The measure does not affect any

Later Support Promised

D. C. Rent Control Extension Delayed by Action in Senate

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

District rent control extension hit a Senate snag yesterday but picked up new promise of powerful support at a later date.

The idea of hooking a District rent control extension to the national rent bill was dropped by District Chairman Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.). He did it a few minutes before the Senate approved the national bill, 36 to 28, and sent it to the House.

But before dropping his District rent amendment, Senator Neely won from Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.), whose marathon talk had delayed the national bill, promise of no more than a 30-minute speech against any District rent control extension bill that may later be presented.

A direct promise of support for District rent control extension was also made to the Senate by Chairman Walter F. George (D., Ga.)

AEC Soon to Ask More Millions For Reactors, May Lift Secrecy

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

The Atomic Energy Commission will soon ask Congress for permission to contract for the spending of "some hundreds of millions" of additional dollars on an enlarged hydrogen and atom bomb program.

The exact amount of the new contract authorization that the AEC wants has not yet been determined, it was learned, but informed sources say it runs to "a very large gob" of money. The commission's current rate of spending is between $700 and $800 million a year.

When the decision was reached last January to press ahead in an attempt to manufacture the H-bomb, the AEC did not immediately ask for heavily increased appropriations. Now, however, it apparently sees its way more clearly, and is ready to explain to Congress what new and additional facilities must be erected.

The bulk of the proposed new spending authorizations, it is understood, will be for the building of more reactors—i.e., atomic furnaces in which to create nuclear explosives.

The desired end product will be the special variety of common hydrogen needed for an H-bomb. The reactors will doubtless be built, however, in such a form that if the H-bomb proves to be impossible or not practical they can be used for increased production of plutonium or a uranium isotope suitable for atomic explosion.

One by-product of the request for new money, which will probably go to the Capitol in a week or two, may be a slight easing of the present super-strict secrecy rules in the AEC.

The commission feels that in order to make an intelligent presentation of its needs to the appropriations and other committees of Congress, it must necessarily talk about certain phases of operations where the gag rule now applies.

Furthermore, many AEC officials believe they will have to have some additional leeway in talking about what they are doing if only to be able to recruit a larger and more high-powered staff of scientists. Unless the prospects for new jobs can be told something about the sort of work for which they are needed, it is felt that their services cannot be enlisted.

The AEC has submitted a memorandum to the White House outlining what additional facts and figures it would like to disclose to Congress in connection with its request for new contracting authority. A decision on this paper may be forthcoming within the week.

In general, the AEC would like to put out to the public certain

Jaffe Refuses Information To Senators

Senators investigating the 1945 Amerasia case got no help yesterday from the principal figure in the affair.

Philip J. Jaffe, editor of the magazine in the offices of which hundreds of Federal documents were discovered, appeared under subpena before a special Senate investigating committee, but he gave it the silent treatment.

He answered only a handful of the "most elementary" of hundreds of questions shot at him. He told his name, address, and admitted he knew the man who appeared with him as his counsel, O. John Rogge. For all the rest, he declined to answer on grounds of fear of self-incrimination.

Senator Green (D., R. I.), acting chairman of the subcommittee, said, "It was the most futile hearing I think I have ever had a part in."

He told reporters after it was concluded that Jaffe's stock reply

House Approves Area Military Works Measure

The House yesterday approved and sent to the Senate a compromise military works bill that includes $17,070,500 in projects in the Washington area.

The Senate has previously approved the measure in different form. Next step, the final Congressional action, is expected to be Senate approval of the compromise plan recommended by a conference committee.

Included in the bill is authorization for seven million dollars to move the Naval Observatory from Washington to Charlottesville, Va.

Army, Navy and Air Force projects authorized by the bill would total about $596,000,000.

Of this, more than $100,000,000 would be used to tighten air defenses in Alaska.

British Labor Party Rejects Proposals to Unify Europe

London, June 12 (NYHT).—The Labor Party came out openly today against proposals for the economic and political unification of western Europe.

The party's main objections, embodied in a statement by its national executive committee, were that these proposals, including the Schuman plan for pooling western Europe's coal and steel industries, conflict with the principles of British democratic socialism and with Britain's economic position in the world.

The national executive committee is the supreme governing body of the Labor Party. Its decisions, in most cases, are tantamount to government policy.

The committee's statement was the first full-length exposition of foreign policy the committee has issued since the Labor government came to power after the war ended in 1945.

Although the statement has several passages favorable to the principle of western European unity, these are heavily outweighed by the main theme, which reflects a deep-rooted isolationism.

It suggests a gradual harmonization of governmental policies leading to the ultimate unity of

New Weapon Veil Is Lifted As Deterrent

'Squash-Head' Shell To Destroy Tanks Due to Reach Troops Before A-Weapons

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

A host of new defensive land weapons—including a highly promising "squash-head" antitank shell—are expected to assume great importance in the cold war between the East and West within the next two or three years.

Now under development by the United States Army, they are being counted on to partially replace the atomic bomb as a major deterrent against a Soviet attack on western Europe and to help stop such an assault if it comes.

Once Russia has accumulated a stockpile of A-bombs, it is felt, this present great deterrent to aggression will have lost some of its force. But by then, if these new arms can be in the hands of the armies of the United States and western Europe, they can be a tremendous trump card in defenses of the West.

The new stable of defensive weapons on the way includes five types of antiaircraft armament for protection of American industrial centers against long-range atomic attack as well as armies in the field.

Anti-Tank Projectile

Besides atomic artillery and guided missiles with atom warheads—recently mentioned as under development by top Army officials—two more conventional answers to Russia's 40,000 tanks and multimillion-man Army are on the way.

These new anti-tank defenses—light recoilless rifles firing finned "shaped charge" 75 and 90-millimeter shells and the new "squash-head" projectile—should be in the hands of troops well ahead of the time that atomic artillery and other tactical A-weapons become a reality.

The hollow-shaped charge fired from a bazooka-type weapon has been no secret since war days, but the "squash-head" shell has been classified until recently. Very little can be said about it even now. But it aims at knocking out a tank, not by punching a hole in it, but by the blast effect. A light shell case is used and the explosion is timed to take place slightly after impact. The inner side of the tank's steel wall spalls or flakes off without penetration from the outside. But the effect is equally unpleasant for those inside.

Reasons for Lifting Veil

Why has the veil been lifted from these previously closely held Army secrets within the past week or so?

The answer, The Washington Post learns, is fourfold.

First—For the deterrent effect on the Russians. Army chiefs have not said exactly how far off the weapons are, or how quickly some of them could be put into the hands of troops with development and production stepped up in an emergency. Conviction that if the Kremlin believes western Europe can be successfully defended with American aid they will not move is back of this line of thought.

Second—To convince the people and governments of western Europe that the Red army can be stopped. These new weapons, it is believed, can make possible a successful defense of the Elbe, the Rhine or some other natural barrier with far fewer divisions than old-line military thinking dictated. If western Europe's confidence and will to resist is strengthened, the sooner and more likely will its defenses become a

Creeping Paralysis

Reds Reported Leading Huks In Philippine Insurrection

This is the second of a series of articles on the situation in the Philippines by a veteran correspondent and writer on Far Eastern affairs.

By Harold R. Isaacs

Manila, June 12.—The "crisis" in the Philippines does not mean, as some reports have suggested, that "collapse is imminent."

It is more a matter of creeping paralysis in keeping the peace, keeping the government's fiscal head above water, and, most of all keeping enough people convinced that they are going to solve their problems by democratic means.

The Communists are leading an armed insurrection in the provinces but they do not at this time represent a direct military threat to the government.

Their forces are known as the "Huks," or the Hukbalahap, which began its career as an anti-Japanese guerilla force during the war. There were several abortive truces after the war's end, but never a settlement, partly because of the government's inability or unwillingness to meet peasant demands, and partly because the Filipino politicians settled among themselves the embarrassing issue of pro-Japanese collaboration.

The issue is more or less dead in Filipino politics, but it lies like a poison at the substratum of Filipino public life. Non-Communist sympathy for the Huks has its roots in part in this fact because many who fought the Japanese have never gotten over the bitterness of the discovery that you got along just as well if you collaborated. It is an issue that gnaws at many a Filipino conscience and the Huks have managed to make themselves the unwanted guardians of that conscience.

"I like to speak my mind freely," said one former guerilla, "and I suppose if it came to a wartime showdown again, I'd fight with the Americans again." He paused, and then added slowly: "But I don't know what I'd do if you had the Japanese on your side. I think in that case I might take to the hills with the Huks."

The Huks were originally led

Milk Negotiators Deadlocked After Eleven-Hour Session; Doctors Ask Delivery to Sick

5000 Gallons of Milk Sent to Hospitals; Over-Counter Sales Made to Families

By V. R. Montanari
Post Reporter

As the Washington area really began to feel the effects of the milk stoppage, the community's doctors last night urged dairy and union officials to deliver milk to those needing it to maintain health.

The District Medical Society and the Medico-Chirurgical Society of Washington declared in a joint statement that the current emergency sysem to provide milk for hospitals, institutions, children and patients on doctors' orders is "inadequate." They deplored the lack of advance warning of the impending stoppage.

The two societies said they were ready to cooperate with the dairies and the union in arranging home milk delivery. Persons in need of milk "should not be required to go to some designated place to obtain a supply."

The present procedure of buying milk at the Richfield Dairy plant for children and the ill is in many instances "not only a hardship, but an impossibility," the doctors urged.

Yesterday emergency needs were pretty well taken care of. Most adult and healthy milk drinkers went without, beginning with lunch.

Exceptions were families fortunate enough to reach one of the few milk-stocked stores at just the time a supply truck arrived.

Go Out of Town

Other consumers drove as far as Manassas, Va., and other points in the outskirts for their supplies. Several stores in nearby Maryland and Virginia similarly found their own sources at dairies outside the stoppage area.

In short, there was plenty of milk available, if you could find out for sure where it was and provide your own transportation. A shortage of containers, particularly glass bottles, also was an increasing problem.

Parents armed with medical certificates obtained 4000 gallons for their children at the Richfield Dairy emergency distribution center at 1230 S. Capitol st., on a cash-and-carry basis. Officials stressed empty quart bottles should be brought to exchange for full ones.

Called Ridiculous

This emergency system was scored as "stupid and ridiculous" by Dr. Joseph S. Wall, pediatrician and chief of staff of Children's Hospital, who pointed out that a great many parents are working during the 9 a. m. to 6 p. m. period when the emergency store is open. Many have no transportation, he added.

Patients at public and private institutions did not suffer, getting 5000 gallons. The 14 District institutions, from Gallinger Hospital and Glenn Dale (TB) Sanatorium to the child day care centers and District Jail, received their regular 1100 gallons a day under another emergency plan.

There were some delays in milk deliveries to private hospitals and sanatoriums, but by the end of the day they were all served by unidentified trucks representing the cooperation of all the dairies and the union.

At Blair House President Truman apparently was not worrying. A White House spokesman said Mr. Truman is the only member of

15 Years' Experience

Helaine A. Todd Is Named Juvenile Court Social Director

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

Miss Helaine A. Todd, a veteran of more than 15 years in social service, yesterday was appointed Director of Social Work of the controversy-wracked Juvenile Court.

The appointment is effective August 1 and is subject to Civil Service approval, said Judge Edith H. Cockrill. The judge added that Miss Todd meets the strict requirements laid down by the American Association of Social Workers.

Miss Todd, who is 44 and lives at the Presidential Apartments, 1026 16th st. nw., is widely known in Washington for her work here. At present, she is completing her study for a doctorate in social work at the University of Pennsylvania and commutes weekends back to her Washington apartment.

To a reporter, she outlined her basic philosophy of handling juvenile offenders, but said it could not be reduced to a recipe.

She brings to the court a firm conviction that while the community and family factors may be changed so as to rehabilitate an errant child, there are many situations where the young must be sent to a reformatory.

"It is not a question of punitive versus lax," she said. "It is a balance of factors where the child's determination weighs heavily.

"There are situations where we can change the community environment, change the family situation, and yet cannot change the child. Each child is a person, with a mind of his own. If he will not change, sometimes there is nothing we can do."

Miss Todd will replace Miss Virginia Clary at the court. Miss Clary, along with Miss Clare Fagrie, resigned in protest of what they considered "punitive" measures by the court.

Asked for her opinion of the controversy, Miss Todd replied:

"I would think I would be very presumptuous to have an opinion on this. Only those who have intimate experience with the situation can gauge it."

During the past year, in addition to her studies, Miss Todd has been instructor in social case work at the University of Pennsylvania School of Social Work.

From June, 1947, until September, 1949, she was associated with the Child Welfare Division of the District of Columbia Board of Public Welfare, acting as senior supervisor in developing policies and procedure and organizing the Foster Home Section. She also was a representative of the BPW at Juvenile Court under Judges Fay L. Bentley, Walter J. Casey and Judge Cockrill.

In the latter capacity, she often made recommendations to the judges as to what measures should

Peurifoy Hits Fund Riders As Unsound

The State Department will have to wipe out about 4000 jobs if the House-approved Taber-Thomas and Jensen riders are enacted into law, or about 20 percent of its present staff.

Nearly 1000 of the threatened jobs are in this city.

Deputy Undersecretary Jack Peurifoy has urged the Senate Appropriations Committee not only to reject the two job-cutting amendments, but also to restore cuts in State's budget as voted by the House.

"These amendments," he testified, "would drastically reduce further the resources with which the department would be expected to fulfill its responsibilities in perhaps the most critical period in the history of our country's international relations."

Peurifoy estimated that 2800 jobs in the Foreign Services would

D. C. Lawyer, Held At Ellis Island 5 Years, Loses Plea

New York, June 12 (U.P.).—Federal Judge William Bondy ruled today that the Attorney General may deport a German-born lawyer who served in both the German and American armies in World War II.

Frederick Bauer, 45, a former patent attorney in Washington, D. C., and his wife have been detained on Ellis Island for five years. Both of their children were born there.

He was arrested on suspicion of being a German spy while serving as a photographer in the United States Army in 1945. He was acquitted of that charge, but an investigation disclosed he had served in the German army from 1940 to 1942. Bauer claimed he was forced into the Wehrmacht while visiting his native Germany.

U. S. Offers $12,500,000 Aid As Point Four Planning Begins

Lake Success, June 12 (NYHT).—The United States offered $12,500,000 today to a United Nations technical assistance program designed to benefit two thirds of the world's inhabitants who live in backward areas, and called on other nations to "share the responsibility" by contributing another $8,330,000.

Rallying to the challenge, 14 nations pledged the equivalent of approximately 6 million dollars before the first day's session adjourned. Substantial contributions are expected Tuesday from Argentina, India and Switzerland, with smaller amounts from other nations.

Stubbornly refusing to sit down at a U. N. meeting while the Chinese Nationalists are present, the Cominform nations boycotted the technical assistance conference, which was called to ascertain and allocate contributions to a voluntary fund for raising living standards of millions of people.

However, Yugoslavia brought up the Chinese question, seeking to have a special invitation extended to Communist China. The proposal was voted down 26 to 9, with 13 countries abstaining.

Injunction Sought Against 6 Dairies; Frederick Plant Pickets 'Egged'

By Sam Stavisky

Negotiators seeking to end the dairy industry work stoppage—and the city's milk drought—recessed today at 1 a.m. without progress.

Announcement of the recess until 10 a.m. today was made by Federal Mediators Martin J. O'Connell and Henry G. Baker. The concilation session had lasted eleven hours.

The mediators said the last proposal was a compromise "suggestion" made by the union at 9:30 p.m. last night. At 1 a.m. today the dairy representatives said it would make a settlement proposal before 10 a.m. today.

The mediators said, "We are keenly disappointed that management did not reply to the proposal at this time. We offered to stay all night."

Even as Federal mediators tried to find a solution of the one issue in the dispute—a shorter work week—the union sought an injunction to force six of the companies to reopen and resume their milk-processing operations.

Local 246, AFL Milk Drivers and Dairy Employes, formally charged the six dairies with a "lockout"—an unfair labor practice under the Taft-Hartley Act—and asked the National Labor Relations Board to reopen the plants via court order. The union insists it is on strike against three dairies only.

Relatively Calm

Meanwhile, Greater Washington suffered through a third day of milk drought, with its nearly 1,500,000 residents displaying relative calm over the acute shortage.

Although thousands of parents scrambled around the city and its environs, searching for milk from store to store; although hundreds flocked to the city's lone emergency milk distribution station, no outburst of violence was reported here.

However, 42 miles away in Frederick, Md., where the milk supply is plentiful, four union pickets at the Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase receiving plant, were pelted with eggs by several carloads of unidentified assailants.

Emergency Deliveries Start

Emergency deliviers to hospitals, orphanages, and other institutions here and in nearby Maryland and Virginia were carried out for the first time yesterday, under an arrangement agreed to by the nine dairies and the union on Sunday. Individual citizens had to go to the Richfield Dairy, 1230 South Capitol st., with a doctor's certificate, to get milk for their babies. Business here was brisk, but orderly.

On Capitol Hill Representative John L. McMillan (D., S. C.), chairman of the House District Committee, announced he would confer today with Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West to determine what Congress might do about the dispute. The District's legislative leader said that unless it is settled by then, the dispute would be "certain to be discussed" by his committee Wednesday.

Halt Milk Violence, Pa. Police Ordered

Pissburgh, June 12 (AP).—Gov. James H. Duff stepped into the western Pennsylvania milk strike today with orders to State police to crack down on "criminal acts of violence."

Union spokesmen replied there has been no violence and that "the Governor has been misinformed."

State police headquarters reported special patrols are rolling over the highways to keep the roads open—not to convoy milk trucks. An officer of the State constabulary said at least three truckers had been threatened.

Police at Canonsburg said a trucker reported his load of 650 quarts of milk was dumped by a carload of men.

State Police Capt. Andrew J. Hudock said truck driver O. W. Rittenhouse was halted by armed pickets at Vanderbilt.

Rittenhouse said the men forced his truck onto a side road and dumped its load of milk. Burlap bags covered license plates on the pickets' autos, he added.

The same union that called out drivers in Pittsburgh is demanding similar terms in Washington.

Bands of motorized pickets were reported patrolling several highways in the seven-county area hit by the walkout of 2399 AFL milk drivers and dairy employes. About 2,300,000 people live in the strike area.

While negotiations dragged on, housewives explored all angles in efforts to get milk for infants, sick children and invalids.

Striking members of the dairy workers union walked out Friday to support demands for a wage increase. They want the same rate of pay for a 40-hour week as for a 48-hour week. They also demand that drivers' daily guarantee be increased from $10 to $13.50. The dealers have offered $11. They claim drivers now earn from $300 to $900 a month.

Sixty-eight firms, members of the Greater Milk Dealers Association, have been closed by the walkout. An emergency set-up is operating, with union and company cooperation, to provide milk for emergency users like hospitals and families with formula-fed babies.

Health Dept. Tells How to Use Substitutes During Milk Crisis

The District Health Department yesterday issued the following instructions for use of evaporated milk and milk powder and for home pasteurization of raw milk:

A physician should be consulted for specific instructions on the use of these products, which the department considers adequate substitutes for fresh milk. They can be used in all cooking.

One tall can of evaporated milk, mixed with an equal part of water, will give one quart of whole milk.

Made From Skim Milk

Powdered milk comes in two forms, whole dry milk and nonfat dry milk. Nonfat dry milk is made from skim milk.

To mix powdered milk, pour the powder over luke warm water and shake in a tightly closed jar, allowing jar space for foam. The same result can be achieved in an open bowl with a rotary egg beater. Refrigerate immediately.

A quart of milk obtained from the nonfat dry powder can be made to equal a quart of whole milk by the addition of three tablespoons of fortified margarine or butter to the daily meals.

Cheese Is Substitute

One-quarter pound of yellow cheese provides the same nutrients as one quart of milk. Ice cream is another substitute.

To pasteurize raw milk, use a double boiler. When the water begins boiling in the bottom pot, keep it boiling for 30 minutes. Cool quickly and store in the refrigerator. Cooling the milk quickly is important. Two pans which fit inside each other will serve if a double boiler is unavailable.

N. Y. Newspaper Guild Calls Strike on World Telegram-Sun

New York, June 12 (AP).—The New York local of the American Newspaper Guild (CIO) today called a strike against the New York World-Telegram and Sun, effective at 4:30 a. m. (EST) Tuesday.

Approximately 540 editorial and commercial employes under guild jurisdiction are involved.

The strike vote came after three months of negotiations, which ended in an impasse this afternoon. Representatives of the U. S. Conciliation Service have taken part in the talks.

The union presented what it called "rock bottom" demands, including a 10 percent general wage increase; minimums ranging from $40 for office boys to $120 for experienced reporters; a five-day week of a higher pay classification for tabulators; a requirement that 9 out of 10 new employes be guild members; a night differential of one hour's pay per shift; arbitration of group layoffs on economy grounds, and a one-year contract.

The World-Telegram and Sun management said it could not accept the final guild demands in view of economic conditions. The management offered these terms:

A general increase ranging from $2 to $5 weekly; increases of $1 to $3.50 a week in minimums, making the top contract minimum $113.50; arbitration of wage questions if both sides cannot agree; a job security clause "in effect" the same as that in force at the New York Times; maintenance of membership; eight holidays a year with pay instead of the present six; a night differential of 75 cents per night shift and $1.50 per shift for the third or overnight shift; and a 35-hour work week instead of the present 37½.

"In general wage increase, minimums and night differential," the management said in a statement, "our offer goes far beyond anything offered by any other major New York newspapers. On hours, vacations and holidays it is the equal of the best now in effect or offered by any of these same papers. On job and union security it is in line with that accepted by the guild from the Times."

Ed Easton, chairman of the World-Telegram and Sun unit of the guild, denied management's statement that its offer was as good as or better than other New York newspaper conditions.

"Only within the past week has the World-Telegram and Sun shown any willingness to bargain," Easton said in a statement, "and its final proposal today is still not even close to the contracts of other papers.

"The united council was therefore faced with this choice: either strike to obtain a decent contract or give in to management's stubbornness. . . .

"All we want is to be treated as everybody else in the business is."

Milk Is Still Available

the family in town and that he isn't much of a milk drinker—maybe a glass or two a day. There's enough at Blair House for two or three more days, at least.

Otherwise, buying milk was decidedly a hit-or-miss proposition yesterday. High's stores, with their own nonunion dairy organization, sold out the several thousand gallons of milk they had through their 65 retail outlets.

As store managers described it, consumers in many cases followed High's trucks from the dairy and wolfed the supply as soon as it reached the stores. There was no chance to put it away. The Highland Farms Dairy was a "madhouse."

Small nonuoion dairies, such as Martin's on New Hampshire ave. extended, the Golden Rule at Hillendale, Birmingham and Hurst in Manassas and others outside the metropolitan area were "swamped" with both telephone calls and customers.

While most of the customers were stores in Virginia and Maryland—such as the Shirley stores, which sent trucks in a steady stream to the Birmingham Dairy—private families were also driving to these oases. But containers began to run out.

In Alexandria a special meeting of the City Council declared the stoppage an official emergency and called on Virginia Governor John S. Battle to relieve the situation. Governor Battle said he would confer with State Attorney General J. Lindsay Almond today to see what could be done.

The Interfederation Council, representing citizens' associations, voted last night to urge an increase in emergency distribution points for families.

The Maryland & Virginia Milk Producers Association, deluged with calls from consumers, also had a major problem to redistribute all but a trickle of the 160,000 gallons that normally comes into the area.

An association spokesman said the entire Saturday, Sunday and Monday output from the farms had been moved, most of it going to cheese and ice cream manufacturers within a 400 to 500-mile radius of Washington.

Although, thus far, it was not found necessary to "dump" milk on the market, the association had not yet agreed on prices to be obtained on its outside sales. Officials said continuation of the work stoppage more than a day or two probably would depress prices.

The association is operating night and day on the distribution job. An official estimated they are supplying about four times the usual requirements to the small dairies they are operating. He added they are ready to supply any dairy needing milk and able to process and bottle it.

School cafeterias were unable to get milk. Fruit juices were substituted.

Warning on Raw Milk

The Health Department warned that raw milk should be "viewed with grave suspicion." Health Officer Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger said no reports of unauthorized milk peddling had been received.

He suggested that all well adults do without milk, to leave the supply for infants and the sick.

Lunchers found restaurants and drug stores had run out early in the day. Patrons of hotel dining rooms, however, found the hostelries were supplied for the day, most expecting to run out today. Some served children only.

Some residents turned to powdered and evaporated milk, but there was little evidence of "runs" on these substitutes. Restaurants also began to use them for cooking and for coffee cream.

Senate and House restaurants quickly ran out of milk at noon.

Representative H. Carl Andersen (R., Minn.) said he agreed with yesterday's editorial in The Washington Post. He declared it is a well established policy that strikes against police and fire departments cannot be permitted because they are against public safety. A similar policy should be used in milk strikes, which affect the people's food supply, he said.

Lockout Charges Filed Against Six Dairies

W. Va.), chairman of the Senate District Committee—Washington's other "mayor"—instructed Committee Counsel Gerhard van Arkel to check the local milk situation.

Yesterday, for the third time since the work stoppage began about noon of Saturday, the union sent a telegram to the industry negotiators declaring there is no strik in effect against the Lucerne, Thompson, Alexandria, Model Farms, Richfield and Embassy Dairies. The 900 union employes of these dairies have reported to work been ordered to continue to show up for work at their regular reporting time.

The local said that its strike involves only 700 employes and is directed against three dairies—Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase, Wakefield and Harvey. Pickets are being maintained at the buildings of these companies only, the union asserted.

The nine companies, however, take the position that the union notified the employes through a Federal mediator that negotiations for a new contract had collapsed and that a strike was in effect. Since the union was negotiating a contract with the industry as a whole, the strike notification meant that all the companies were struck, according to managment spokesmen.

The union's charges of unfair labor practices, lodged against the six "nonstruck" companies was filed with NLRB Regional Manager John A. Penello in Baltimore by Attorney Martin F. O'Donoghue. Penello immediately dispatched an investigator to Washington.

An Uncommon Request

In seeking an injunction against a "lockout," the union is making an uncommon request of the NLRB. The office of the NLRB general counsel, which deals with unfair labor practice charges, has gone to court only twice, to seek injunctions to halt alleged unfair practices committed by employers against unions.

Chief issue in the dispute is the union's demand for a shorter work week without loss of pay. Specifically, the union wants a 5-day, 40-hour week. The employes now work a 6-day, 48-hour week.

Insist on Sunday Shutdown

The companies have offered a five-day work week, but only on condition that the union agrees to a six-day-a-week plant operation. The employers say that they cannot grant the five-day work week unless they shut down the dairy altogether on Sunday, otherwise the cost of milk would jump considerably.

The union has flatly rejected the possibility of a six-day plant operation. In this stand the local here—and the striking Pittsburgh local as well—is holding firm on a policy established by the Teamsters Union Conference of Dairy Employes. The conference, meeting in Chicago last May, declared the five-day work week tied in with the six-day plant operation—known as the "Philadelphia plan"—would result in hardship to customers and resulting loss of business—and pay—to the milk truck drivers.

One Issue Balks Peace

There is but one key issue in the milk industry work stoppage. AFL dairy employes and milk drivers want a five-day 40-hour week with the same take-home pay they now get for a six-day 48-hour week.

The nine unionized dairies have offered a five-day week, with time-and-a-haolf pay for plant employes after 40 hours and time-and-a-half pay for drivers after 44hours.

The dairies want a six-day plant operation to save the cost of operating on Sundays. The union insists any company offer must include the present seven-day system of operations delivering milk to homes every other day. The union argues that elimination of Sunday deliveries would shift some business to retail outlets, costing drivers commission pay. Drivers now receive $63.50 gfiuaranteed base pay and average $75 to $80 a week with commissions.

Tito Seeks Credit In West Germany

Quits Reuters

Briton Casts His Lot With German Reds

Berlin, June 12 (AP).—The chief Berlin correspondent of Reuters, British News agency, denounced his past career as a "tool of the American war machine" today and obtained asylum in the Soviet sector.

John Peet, 34-year-old Londoner and former volunteer with the International Brigade in the Spanish Civil War, announced his decision at a news conference called by Gerhart Eisler, East German propaganda chief. His action was a complete surprise to his employers.

Reuters then announced his connection with the agency had ceased.

"Mr. Peet's action comes as a complete surprise," the Reuters announcement said . "None of his British or American newspaper and news agency colleagues in Germany apparently had any forewarning or inkling of the fact that he had any pronounced political views.

"His news messages always have accurate, impartial and beyond reproach."

Peet told Western correspondents today he is not a Communist, but he readily admitted he is now hunting a job with the Communist-controlled press in the eastern sector.

"Anglo-American occupation policy is slowly but surely directed at making West Germany the springboard for a new war," he charged. "The remilitarization of West Germany is already in full course. Western occupation powers have given permission for West German firms again to manufacture rifles and poison gas."

Frankfurt, June 12 (AP).—Yugoslavia has sent a delegation to West Germany to seek a 100 million dollar credit to bolster its economy against the Cominform blockade.

Premier Marshal Tito's nine-man mission is negotiating for economic aid at a time when the West German Republic has balanced its trade with western Europe for the first time, according to American officials.

Just over a year ago, Yugoslavia was severely critical of West Germany's growing economic strength. Occupation powers, particularly the United States—with veto powers over trade agreements—must decide whether it is in Western interests to build up Communist Yugoslavia at Germany's expense, at least until 1952.

The Yugoslavs want to buy 80 million to 100 million dollars worth of power station equipment, foundries, oil-drilling machinery, cable plants and ore and coal mining equipment from the Germans.

With payments starting in 1952, and ending in 1957, the Yugoslav proposal is called a five-year credit. But officials here point out it amounts to a seven-year credit since deliveries would start immediately.

Yugoslavia's repayment would be in food and agricultural products, including grains, and possibly in metals and ores.

West Germany, which had a 50-million-dollar trade deficit with Western Europe last December, is now selling this area about 100 million dollars worth of goods a month and importing about the same amount from the area, thus balancing this trade for the first time since the war.

tribute $10 million if the other nations would match it with $7 million, and, Thorp said, the U. S. would raise the figure progressively to $12,500,000 for the 18-month period ending December 31, 1951, provided its share does not represent more than 60 percent of the total amount peldged.

He said America's position was based on the idea that the program is an expression of international cooperation and, as such, many countries must contribute and share the responsibility.

"It follows that no country must dominate a program, either in responsibility or contribution," he said, "but at the same time our position does indicate our great desire that the project be successful."

In opening the conference, Secretary General Trygve Lie gave full credit to President Truman for initiating the technical assistance program by enunciating Point Four in his inaugural address.

The expanded aid program would remove the danger of under-developed areas falling farther and farther behind, Lie said, by taking effective measures to "bring them the benefits of modern science and technology."

The conference elected Dr. Hernan Santa Cruz of Chile as president. Dr. G. C. S. Corea of Ceylon and Fernand van Langhenhove of Belgium were named vice presidents.

Y. C. Mei of Nationalist China indicated his government, although in arrears in many contributions to the U. N. and its organs, would provide a token cash contribution to the technical assistance program.

Contributions, in their equivalent to U. S. dollars, were: Britain, $2,100,000; France, $1,200,000; Canada, $765,000; Brazil, $406,000; Australia, $400,000; Netherlands, $400,000; Belgium, $270,000; Pakistan, $140,000; Yugoslavia, $50,000; Iran, $40,000; Venezuela, $40,000; Norway, $35,000, and Ethiopia, $20,000.

The American contribution was provided for in the omnibus foreign assistance bill, but Congress still must appropriate the money.

Niemoeller Stand On Communism Probed by Church

Berlin, June 12 (AP).—Two recent speeches by the Rev. Martin Niemoeller, which Berlin newspapers have interpreted as pro-Communist, are being investigated by his superiors in the German Evangelical Church, it was disclosed tonight.

Both the Communist and anti-Communist press have quoted the famed anti-Nazi pastor as stating he is opposed to any church "crusade against communism" and as proclaiming that "it is an infamous lie that the church would be ruined in a Bolshevist world."

Investigation of the speeches was disclosed by the press officer for Bishop Otto Dibelius. He said there is no intention to prejudice Niemoeller but that previous remarks by the outspoken pastor had "repeatedly put the church in an awkward position."

To Show Pact Workable

Third—To convince the United States Congress and the American people that the North Atlantic mutual defense program is practicable and worth the money spent on it.

Fourth — Unless appropriations are forthcoming for Army research and development of these new defensive weapons and adequate procurement funds follow, the new arms will not be available and the whole defensive structure fails. There has been a feeling among many Congressmen that only the Air Force and Navy need sizeable research and development money and that the Army can get along on a pittance.

In effect, then, one motive behind the recent disclosures of new land weapons has been a bid for a larger Army share of future defense budgets. Top military men are convinced that their promising new defensive weapons can play a vital role in keeping the peace or winning the war if it comes. They believe the defense has won or can win an ascendency over the offense for the foreseeable future.

Defenders Remain Dispersed

Under new concepts of defensive land fighting, defending forces can remain dispersed. Conventional artillery—like our 105-mm. and 155-mm. howitzers—can concentrate their fire without being massed. Firing "squash-head" shells or atmoic warheads, it is felt they could smash offensive armor and troops concentrated for a river crossing or move through a mountain pass.

But the new antitank and anti-aircraft defenses, tanks, tactical atomic weapons and airborne equipment will cost large sums to develop and procure in even reasonable quantities. To get them will mean a sizeable increase in the annual Army budget.

The new ack-ack weapons include:

(1) Present 90-mm. and 120-mm. guns, with new fire-control apparatus capable of tracking and shooting down modern high-speed planes.

(2) A 60-caliber "Stinger"—multiple-mount machineguns with a very high rate of fire—for use against low-flying airplanes. Still under development, it tracks manually.

(3) The 75-mm. "Skysweeper"—a completely automatic, rapid-firing weapon—for use against planes a few thousand feet up. Some are being purchased.

(4) A rocket that can reach altitudes of 60,000 feet. Described as an "area" weapon because it lacks pinpoint accuracy, it could be procured cheap in large numbers.

(5) Ground-to-air guided missiles, which have great potential. Tied in with intercepter planes, they promise within the next few years to provide American industrial centers with some reasonable security against A-bomb attacks.

Limited numbers of three new types of tanks also are to be bought next year. They are a 28-ton highly "agile" light tank which can be transported in the new Douglas C-124 transport; a new medium, an da new heavy. A few of the latter are to be bought for test purposes under 1951 funds, under a recently revised decision, but the Army will not stock up on such heavier models if later tests show the new anti-tank weapons can stop them.

Senate Probers Get Forrestal Diary Reference to Amerasia

Cincinnati, June 12 (AP).—There is only one page in the late James V. Forrestal's dairy that mentions the Amerasia case, the man who has the dairy said tonight, and that has been turned over to Senate investigators.

Eugene Duffield, assistant publisher of the Cincinnati Enquirer, said the Nation's first Secretary of Defense wrote in the diary that he only wanted to be certain President Truman was fully informed about the case.

Duffield was an assistant to Forrestal from November, 1942, to January, 1946. He now is serving as a representative of the executors of Forrestal's estate. He says he removed the papers from their repository at the White House May 27.

"Mr. Forrestal did not ask anyone to delay the case," said Duffield.

J. Edgar Hoover, FBI director, said in Milwaukee yesterday that Forrestal did not ask for delays in arrest of six key figures in the Amerasia case.

Duffield quotes Forrestal as writing in the diary on May 28, 1945:

"Major Correa reported to me that the Department of Justice has evidence to the effect that Lieut. Andrew Roth has been furnishing confidential and secret documents to a man named Jaffe, head of a publication named Amerasia in New York City. Jaffe has had intimate relationship with the Russian consul in New York."

Forrestal then named the department of Government involved, Duffield said, and pointed out the possibilities of embarrassment to the President in his (Truman's) talks with Stalin if the action were taken. So he noted, "I asked Captain Vardaman to see to it that the President was informed . . . . "

At Forrestal's own request, his 15-volume diary was taken to the White House and sealed there shortly after he left office, Duffield explained. He added that after Forrestal's death the diary became the property of the estate.

"Anything written from the papers will be submitted to the Government for security clearance before it is published," Duffield said, explaining some of the entries are labeled with security classifications.

Duffield said he has forwarded to the Senate committee investigating the case the page from the diary that states Forrestal's only action was to see that the President was informed.

Duffield declared he has signed an affidavit testifying the one page is the only one he has discovered in the diary in which Forrestal mentioned Amerasia.

London Times Writer Irks M'Arthur Aide

Tokyo, June 12 (AP).—A correspondent for the London Times today said General MacArthur's headquarters had declared him "persona non grata" (unacceptable) because some stories he wrote were considered critical of the occupation.

The correspondent, Frank Hawley, added that he had not been asked to leave Japan, nor were his filing privileges restricted. Headquarters officials declined to comment. So did the Times in London.

Hawley said he was told yesterday by Maj. Gen. E. M. Almond, MacArthur's chief of staff, that a correspondent could be expelled as a bad security risk for publishing news that might interfere with occupation objectives.

No Headquarters Comment

Correspondents immediately asked MacArthur for clarification of security regulations concerning newsmen. He replied at once that there was no change and none was contemplated.

MacArthur specified that his statement, however, could not be "connected with any story dealing with the chief of staff's conversations with Mr. Hawley."

While he did not elaborate, he had sent word earlier in reply to a written question that the case was in Almond's hands.

Almond declined to comment on the ground that the case was a private matter. Thus Hawley's version was the only one available.

Hawley said Almond approached Sir Alvary Gascoigne, head of the British Mission, at a party June 8 and asked him to call at headquarters. There he was told the Times correspondent was persona non grata, Hawley added.

Hawley later that day had the first of two meetings with Almond. He said the general did not tell him he was persona non grata. They discussed a story Hawley had written saying the Japanese Government ban on political demonstrations was unconstitutional.

He quoted Almond as saying the Japanese Government could "ignore the constitution if such action was, in its opinion, in the interests of the Japaese people as a whole."

A second Hawley story to which Almond objected said that Japanese police wanted to return their guns to the occupation. Hawley said he replied he had found later the story was inaccurate and sent a correction. Hawley said Almond suggested he "toe the headquarters line," declaring "no accredited correspondent should publish any news likely to interfere with MacArthur's objectives."

A few headquarters officers have made it plain they would prefer to have newsmen file only "friendly" dispatches.

Now correspondents wondered if the attitude were hardening as the occupation faces up to a new militant campaign by the Communists.

Gold Granted Delay in Atom Spy Charges

Philadelphia, June 12 (U.P.).—A Federal Judge today granted a temporary delay in the transfer of atom spy suspect Harry Gold to Brooklyn, N. Y., so the defense attorney would have more time to study the case.

Attorney John D. M. Hamilton, former chairman of the Republican National Committee, appointed by the Government to defend the 39-year-old chemist, was granted the delay by Federal Judge James P. McGranery.

Gold, held in $100,000 bail since his arrest May 23, was indicted in Brooklyn Friday on a charge of having served as go-between for convicted British spy Klaus Fuchs in the transmission of wartime atom data to Russia.

Gold indicated he would not oppose transfer to Brooklyn for trial in the Federal court of the Eastern District of New York.

Hamilton, who accepted the defense counsel post "in the public interest," made his request at a brief hearing this morning. He said he had just received a certified copy of the indictment and wanted more time to confer with Gold, study his background, and consider the possibility of having his client tried in Philadelphia.

McGranery said the request was "a reasonable one" and that unless the Government objected, he would grant Hamilton further time here with Gold. The judge also said it would be a handicap for Hamilton to shuttle back and forth between Philadelphia and Brooklyn.

No date was set for his removal to New York. Gold was returned to the Philadelphia County Prison at Holmesburg.

Resignation Of Remington Is Accepted

William W. Remington's resignation from his $10,000-a-year Commerce Department post was accepted officially and without comment yesterday by Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer.

The 32-year-old economist reluctantly quit his job to devote his full attention to defending himself against a perjury indictment handed down last week by a New York Federal grand jury.

Remington was accused of lying when he denied ever being a Communist.

Meanwhile, Michael Lee, who was handed a resign-or-be-fired ultimatum along with Remington, sent his reply to ouster charges filed against him. It was delivered by his attorney, Nathan David.

Lee's reply accused Sawyer of "bad faith" and "partisan" politics in ordering Lee's ouster.

This "reveals the partisan political nature of the attempt to eliminate me from the Government service," the letter said. "Politically inspired efforts to question my loyalty having failed, my administrative ability is now brought into issue."

Lee denied that a grievance case involving another Commerce Department worker was the basis of accusations against him.

"The strained effort to make it appear that the charges against me are in fact based on a grievance proceeding is further proof of the already obvious bad faith behind this attempt . . ." he said.

Lee claimed the action violated a Commerce Department administrative order, which he said made no provision for removal on a charge of "maladministration." He also renewed a request that no further steps be taken until a loyalty board considering his case hands down a decision.

"If I am separated . . . the loyalty proceeding will immediately be discontinued without decision," his letter said. "I do not see how you can fail to appreciate the gross unfairness of (my) position."

While both Remington and Lee were under congressional scrutiny as possible security risks, Sawyer said he demanded their resignations solely in the interest of "good administration". He said their loyalty was not at issue.

Both men originally announced they would fight the ouster charges. Remington changed his mind last Friday, saying he thought it would be better for him to concentrate on the court charges.

He is scheduled to surrender to Federal authorities in New York today for arraignment. He will plead innocent. The Government has demanded the fastest possible trial.

Jaffe Refuses to Give Replies To Amerasia Case Questions

to all the questions put to him—including inquiries on whether he knew about a score of names connected with the Amerasia case—became a sort of "litany." Jaffe kept saying he declined to answer on the advice of counsel, and in accordance with the immunity he believed he had under the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution.

Green said the subcommittee had not yet taken up the question whether to cite Jaffe for contempt of Congress. Although Jaffe was not given a formal warning that such action might result from his refusal to answer, he was nevertheless given certain "intimations" to that effect.

In answer to one question, Jaffe said he voted as a Democrat in "the last election" — presumably the 1949 New York senatorial election. He was also asked, Green said, whether he was registered, for political purposes, as a Communist in New York. At first Jaffe refused to answer; then Green directed him to reply, and he responded that he did not remember.

Also Silent to Reporters

Jaffe and Rogge likewise maintained a policy of silence to reporters yesterday afternoon both before they entered the closed hearing of the subcommittee and afterwards.

Rogge said he would be glad to talk to reporters on "the larger question" of how current investigations had instilled "fear" in America if anyone would ask him. No one did.

Green also said that Rogge made "several speeches" in the hearing, but none of them got as far as the Amerasia case.

The subcommittee has been looking into the strange affairs for some weeks, ever since Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.) demanded an inquiry in connection with his charges of Communist infiltration of the Government.

In the Amerasia matter, there have been persistent charges that the someone put a "fix" on the case with the result that of the six suspects arrested no indictments were returned against three, the prosecution of a fourth was quashed, and the heaviest penalty, that for Jaffe, was only a $2500 fine.

. . . The silent treatment

Raided by OSS and FBI

First the Office of Strategic Services and then the FBI raided the Amerasia magazine offices, discovering hundreds of secret Federal documents there. Jaffe was disclosed to have had close contacts with Earl Browder, former head of the U. S. Communist Party.

The Department of Justice has contended that the light sentences and diffident prosecution was the inevitable result of the fact that the FBI had conducted several illegal entries into defendants' homes and offices and that this illegality tainted the whole case, so that the department was lucky to have obtained such convictions as it did.

information about the hydrogen bomb project that has so far been kept under wraps. At best, however, these data will not be particularly startling and may even fall short of the disclosures that various scientists and experts not connected with the project have already deduced and written about.

On Lifting Secrecy

The commission hopes that during the next several months there may be some relaxation of the secrecy rules against which a host of scientists and laymen have complained. Since the Russians have achieved an atomic explosion, it is clear that considerable information can now be released with complete safety.

But even the most optimistic officials believe that by the very nature of the problem, not much information can be let out that would help ordinary citizens in making up their minds whether the H-bomb effort makes sense from a military and economic point of view.

Certain data may emerge that will bring cheer to the hearts of scientific researchers on technical nuclear matters, but not much to tell the citizens how big a bang the H-bomb will make, how much it will cost to make it, and whether the facilities and money used to manufacture it could be better devoted to making some other form of atom bomb or military weapon.

Furthermore, there is no expectation that Congress will act this year to make necessary changes in the atomic energy law that would permit more technical information to business so that there could be wider private industrial participation in atomic work.

Labor Party Rejects 'Pool'

Europe without surrendering too much national sovereignty.

After outlining a number of proposals inherent in the American-sponsored ideal of European integration, the statement says: "A complete economic union of western Europe must therefore be excluded, since it would demand an unattainable degree of uniformity in the internal policies of the member states. If based on 'laissez-faire' it would not only impede the bridging of the dollar gap but also cause fatal political upheavals. If a complete economic union is impossible, a complete political union is thereby also excluded."

There is repeated reference to the main principles of British democratic socialism—full employment, social justice and economic stability. And the document makes clear that until these principles form the basis of governmental policy throughout western Europe, the British Labor Party will be wary about joining any binding international body.

The committee also rejects one of the basic principles in the Schuman plan—the creation of a supranational authority whose decisions would be binding on its member governments — because socialists obviously would be outvoted by anti-Socialists or non-Socialists.

"No Socialist government in Europe," the statement says, "could submit to the authority of a body whose policies were decided by an anti-Socialist majority."

Former Postal Clerk Given Year for Loyalty Quiz Reply

Philadelphia, June 12 (AP).—A former Philadelphia Postoffice clerk pleaded no contest today to a charge of making false statements about attending Communist Party meetings.

United States District Court Judge George A. Welsh sentenced the man, 35-year-old Bertram Shaffer, to a prison term of a year and a day. He was a postal employe for 12 years.

O. John Rogge, former assistant United States Attorney General and now Shaffer's attorney, said that Shaffer is innocent of the charges but decided not to fight the accusations because of "two considerations—a lack of funds and because of the present political hysteria."

James E. Palmer, jr., of Washington, special assistant to the attorney general, listened to the case an dsaid the prosecution resulted from the "President's loyalty program, which is succeeding because it is ferreting out undesirables from the Federal payrolls."

Shaffer was indicted in 1948 and charged with fraudulent statements to Post Office inspections during loyalty quizzes in 1945.

Judge Welsh told Shaffer, "This is not a question of your political views. Our Government is anxious to have as employes only men who are truly dedicated to our way of life. I am going to give you the same sentence that I usually give for false swearing in the cases of persons seeking to be naturalized."

Facts Dispute Miss Smedley 'Liquidation'

London, June 12 (AP).—Agnes Smedley, 56-year-old American author and newspaperwoman, died May 6, two days after an operation for stomach ulcers, it was learned tonight.

Representative Harold H. Velde (R., Ill.) said in Peoria, Ill., earlier today he believed Miss Smedley was liquidated to prevent her testifying about Soviet espionage before the House Un-American Activities Committee. He advised the British government to investigate the circumstances of her death.

When Miss Smedley's death was made known May 8, no cause was given. It was revealed tonight that an outstanding Oxford pathologist certified after a postmortem, that the cause of death was bronchopneumonia, acute cardiac failure and operation of partial gastrectomy.

The American writer was cremated by an Oxford undertaker who reported that the usual burial certificate was furnished and was in order.

A spokesman for Scotland Yard said no questions about the death have been raised.

Missouri-born, Miss Smedley worked for many years in China. In February, 1949, she was named in a United States Army report on a wartime Soviet spy ring against Japan. She was said in the report to have been a Soviet government agent in Shanghai. She denounced this as a lie. Later the Army retracted the charges and said it had no proof to back up its statements.

Rayburn Predicts Action on Tax Bill

Prospects of Congressional action on a tax bill before adjournment picked up a bit yesterday after a White House leadership conference.

Speaker Sam Rayburn (D., Tex.) told newsmen there is a strong possibility the House will pass a bill, but it may be 10 days to two weeks before the House Ways and Means Committee completes action.

"He (Speaker Rayburn) knows more about it than I do," said Ways and Means Chairman Robert L. Doughton (D., N. C.). "I've stopped predicting."

Senate Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.), who previously termed tax action this session "very doubtful" in view of House slow motion, said much depends on the form of the House bill.

"I can't say what we will do until they get a bill to us," said Lucas. "I'll call a strategy conference then to decide what to do about it."

The Ways and Means Committee meanwhile met all day on proposals to tax business enterprises run by some colleges and educational institutions at a profit. A final vote on this "loophole" was postponed until today.

During nearly five months of tax bill consideration, the committee has voted to cut excise taxes 1.1 billion dollars, nearly twice what the President recommended, and is now trying to find revenue to approximately offset the loss. It is still about 600 million dollars "short."

Rayburn said he has heard "conversation" that Mr. Truman would veto any bill that did not balance tax cuts with new revenue, but never received any communication from the President.

He pointed out that an Administration proposal to raise corporate tax rates from 38 percent to 42 percent, not yet voted on by the committee, would raise from 400 to 650 million dollars in new revenue.

The tax bill status came up during the regular "Big Four" leadership talks with Mr. Truman. Besides Rayburn and Lucas, Vice President Barkley and House Majority Leader John W. McCormack (D., Mass.) sat in on the conference.

"We talked about everything," Rayburn said.

Fireman Hurt as Engine Hits Parked Car

The Washington Post

ANSWERING ALARM—Swerving to miss another car, pumper of Engine Co. 31 (at right, on lawn) hit an auto parked at Nebraska ave. and Northampton st. nw. yesterday morning, ramming it into a telegraph pole. This picture was taken after the car had been hauled from the sidewalk. The car's owner, James Day Baker, Gaithersburg, Md., who bought it two weeks ago, surveys the damage. The fire engine crashed through a screen porch at the home of Dr. Charles G. Aronstein, 5708 Nebraska ave. nw. Injured was the engine driver, Pvt. Allen Lewis, 51, who was responding to a call for an oven fire at 6218 30th st. nw.

Arlington Nurse Killed in Fall From Auto

A 56-year-old Arlington nurse was fatally injured last night when she suddenly opened the door of a moving auto and fell to the ground at 6th and Lexington sts., Arlington police reported.

The woman, Mrs. Mary Belle LaSalle, 519 N. Jefferson st., was pronounced dead at 9:30 p. m. at Arlington Hospital as police investigated the accident, which occurred 2½ hours earlier.

Lieut. Joseph H. Marcey, of the Arlington police force, identified the driver of the car as Corpl. Luther Thompson, 39, stationed at Fort Belvoir hospital.

Marcey quoted Thompson as saying that he and Mrs. LaSalle had an argument over whether he should take her home before picking up a friend at Ft. Belvoir.

Mrs. LaSale disagreed with his plan to take her home first, suddenly opened the car door and fell out, Marcey said the soldier told him.

Marcey also quoted Thompson as saying that he had known Mrs. LaSalle, a registered private nurse, about five months.

Police were still investigating the case late last night. An autopsy is scheduled for today.

In the District, 16-year-old Lawrence Huntsman of 3274 Worthington st. nw., suffered a possible skull fracture and a cut over the right eye last night in a collison between his motor scooter and a car. He was in an undetermined condition at Emergency Hospital.

Police identified the driver as Roy H. Heald, 56, of 6201 Utah ave. nw., a Bureau of Standards engineer. The accident occurred at Rittenhouse st. and Western ave. nw., at 8:30 p. m.

A hearing will be held before the Corporation Counsel.

In another accident, Theodore Miles, 28, of 62 U st. nw., was charged with failure to yield the right of way to an emergency vehicle. His car collided with a police scout car at 1st and K sts. nw., shortly after 5 p. m.

The cruiser, a Fourth Precinct vehicle, was driven by Private Edgar J. Swart, 30, of 4708 Huron ave. se. Police said the police car, responding to a call, was turned around by the impact. No one was injured.

Miles posted $50 collateral for appearance in traffic court today.

Bus Line Extension Profit Told

The Capital Transit Co. would boost its income by more than $14,000 a year if it extended its C-2 and W-2 bus lines in Fairfax Village, a Public Utilities Commission official testified yesterday.

V. A. McElfresh, chief auditor for the PUC, based the figure on results of a survey conducted in the Fairfax Village area by the Capital Transit Co. and the Washington, Marlboro and Annapolis Motor Line Co. Both companies oppose extending the line.

WM&A contends that to extend the V-2 line would compete with its line on Pennsylvania ave. and mean an annual loss to the company of up to $27,000. CTC opposes the extensions, claiming present service would be duplicated.

McElfresh told the PUC yesterday that the survey showed the yearly loss to WM&A would be $12,409 for the C-2 extension and $145 for the W-2.

The hearing was continued until June 20 at 10 a. m., in Room 203 of the District Building.

Interim Bill Planned In Tidelands Battle

By Senate Unit

3 Measures For Area Approved

A bill to set up a system of mutual aid for fire departments in the Washington Metropolitan area was one of three measures approved by a Senate District subcommittee at the close of a hearing yesterday.

The other bills call for enactment of new registration laws for architects and engineers in the District.

The subcommittee, headed by Senator J. Allen Frear, jr., (D., Del.) postponed action on a bill to double the fees for auto dealers' tags and give the District power to suspend or revoke dealers' registrations.

A question was raised about the bill on dealers' tags by Bernard Margolius, attorney for the National Capital Used Car Dealers' Association. He said the association had approved the plan to double the present cost of dealers' tags.

But he asked that the section covering revocations be worked over to protect dealers against arbitrary acts by District agencies.

Frear told Margolius to confer with Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West and propose an amendment to provide for methods of reviewing decisions.

Senator O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) yesterday announced plans for an "interim" congressional resolution to handle the controversial tidelands oil problem until permanent legislation can be worked out.

Carefully hazy on details, the Senator, chairman of the Interior Committee, said the measure would have to have general approval of both sides in the long and bitter argument over control of the oil-rich offshore areas. The Supreme Court last week ruled that the Government has the same paramount interest in the Texas and Louisiana areas as it ruled in 1947 it had in California.

O'Mahoney said the resolution—which might or might not have a time limit—would have to be in line with the court's ruling. That is as President Truman has demanded in the past. In addition, however, the resolution would protect oil companies now drilling off-shore under leases negotiated with the States in good faith but now of doubtful legality and subject to more and costly legal proceedings.

O'Mahoney said he planned to talk to Interior Department officials and to others interested.

Meanwhile, the House is expected shortly to once again pass a bill giving title to the tidelands to the States. But it is doubtful if it can be brought to a Senate vote this late in the session and even if passed it would face an almost certain presidential veto. O'Mahoney said he had been convinced by a nose count of Senators that it could not muster the two-thirds vote to override a veto.

East German Reds To Give Up Claim To Sudetenland

Berlin, June 12 (AP).—East Germany's Communist government plans to make an agreement with Czechoslovakia renouncing any German claims to the Sudetenland.

In announcing this decision tonight Foreign Minister Georg Dertinger said the East German government plans the same sort of agreement with Czechoslovakia it made last week with Poland.

In the pact with Poland, German Communists renounced large territories east of the Oder and Neisse Rivers administered by Poland since World War II.

Millions of Germans have been expelled from the Sudetenland since the war. The Sudetenland contains about 10,000 square miles and is Czechoslovakia's northwest border with Germany.

Hitler seized it after the Munich agreements of 1938, and Czechoslovakia got it back after the war.

be taken involving delinquents before the court. Judge Cockrill was charged with disregarding such advice, but she has asserted she did so only in the cases of 6 out of 110 boys she sent to the National Training School in nine months.

Praises Judge's Attitude

Asked about this, Miss Todd declared:

"I was struck by the thoughtfulness and the careful consideration of Judge Cockrill."

Other experience of Miss Todd include six years as assistant director in charge of staff development, home service, in the American Red Cross with responsibility for developing and administering an in-service training program.

For a year she was executive secretary of the Roanoke Family Service Administration and for eight years, case worker, supervisor and district secretary of the Family Society of Philadelphia. For two years she was assistant professor of social work at Simmons College.

She has participated in numerous programs of the American Social Work Council of Education, Virginia State Welfare Conference, Pennsylvania Welfare Conference, National Conference of Social Work, Missouri State Conference of Social Welfare, Family Shervice Association of America and the American Red Cross.

A native of Chicago, she resided for many years in Pennsylvania before coming here in 1941. She did her undergraduate work at Hood College and holds the degree of MSW from the Pennsylvania School of Social Work.

She is a member of the American Association of Social Workers, Family Welfare Association of America and National Conference of Social Work. She has been a member of the United Community Services committee on fusion of private child welfare agencies.

Judge Cockrill nominated Miss Todd after consulting with Philip Schiff, chairman-elect of the District Chapter, American Association of Social Workers, and with Mrs. Grethe Tobias, chairman of the Juvenile Court committee.

She agreed to follow their standards fo rthe appointee but refused to use their suggested procedure in making the appointee.

The procedure the social workers wished was to appoint a technical committee to review the applications for the post and to conduct oral interviews. Under the plan, the judge would have to choose from the top three recommendations made by the technical committee.

The local AASW joined the Juvenile Court Advisory Committee in urging Judge Cockrill to request a study of the court by representatives of the Children's Bureau, the administrative office of the United States Courts and the Department of Justice. The AASW asked also that representatives of community groups be added to the panel of experts.

"Such a study would point up the current needs of the court," the AASW wrote. "It would also provide an opportunity for impartial review of policies and administrative procedures which have existed over a long period of time, and which may need revision in the light of present conditions and the best professional practices."

Judge Cockrill was not available for comment, but her secretary said that the judge has not yet decided whether she herself will request the study, which the judge has said she favors.

However, Schiff said that the judge indicated that she may wait until after public confidence in the court is restored and new appointments are made before requesting the study.

D. C. Principals Group Backs Judge Cockrill

The Elementary Principals Association of the District of Columbia yesterday expressed its confidence in the present practices of Juvenile Court.

In a letter to G. Howland Shaw, chairman of the Juvenile Court Advisory Committee, the association said that "our experience with Judge Cockrill's administration of the court . . . leads us to believe that her point of view is sound and contributes to the welfare of children."

The association, the letter said, "has been impressed with the improvements of children's cases at the Juvenile Court during the administration of Judge Edith Cockrill."

The communication was signed by Carol J. Schaeffer, chairman of the education committee, Dorothy M. Lewis, chairman of the guidance committee, and Alma M. Shugrue, president, and contained the endorsement of Dr. Carl F. Hansen, associate superintendent in charge of elementary schools.

Johnson, Bradley To Meet Radford On Pacific Defense

Honolulu, June 12 (AP).—Secretary Johnson today said he was making his first tour of the Pacific to determine "our ability to meet any crisis today or tomorrow" in the West area.

Johnson, his wife, and Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, arrived by plane this morning. They will proceed to the Philippines and then to Japan for talks with General MacArthur.

Washington and Tokyo reports say a peace treaty for Japan will be the main subject of the conversations with MacArthur. Johnson declined to comment on the treaty in meeting reporters.

Russia, Johnson said, is bent on "making the United States spend itself into disaster." But, he added, the American economy is sound and United States defenses are sufficient for the needs of the moment.

The visiting defense chiefs will remain here until Wednesday night for talks with Admiral Arthur W. Radford, commander of the Pacific fleet, who has just returned from a Pacific tour.

Borden Milk Co. Fined On Baby Food Charge

Chicago, June 12 (AP).—The Borden Milk Co. of New York was fined $1400 for mislabeling and adulterating a baby food that the Government said made six infants in Pittsburgh ill a year ago.

Federal Judge William J. Campbell assessed the fine. The Government charged quantities of the product "Biolac" was not sterile as claimed since tests showed it contained viable organisms.

The company said a thermostatic control in the Borden plant, Elgin, Ill., had failed to function and the product was not totally sterilized. After the tests 46,000 cans were destroyed, of which 25,000 were recalled from grocers' shelves.

Legislators Settle By Rebuking Editor

Baton Rouge, June 12 (U.P.). — The Louisiana Senate tonight rebuked the editor of the New Orleans Item for calling State legislators "trained seals" but refrained from sending him to jail.

The Senate voted 31 to 2 to forego jailing Editor Clayton Fritchey in a riotous session during which cries of "polecat," "carpetbagger" and "Dam Yankee" were hurled at the editor. The Senate decided instead to let "good, plain citizens" punish the "arrogant and contemptuous" man.

Fritchey and Item Publisher David Stern were haled before a special Senate committee last week to determine whether they should be jailed for contempt because of an Item editorial that said most Louisiana legislators show about as much independence "as trained seals" who jump "when their trainer barks."

Under a State constitutional provision they could have been jailed for 12 days if found guilty of disrespect. Although neither apologized, the committee said, "we do not intent to dignify" Fritchey and Stern by recommending jail sentences.

The editorial criticized the Senate for killing a minor monetary measure at the request of Gov. Earl Long, although a committee had approved the bill.

The committee said the editorial was "unfair and unjust" and smacked at carpetbagging. It told the Senate:

"We would leave it to the subscribers, the advertisers, the stockholders and to the good, plain citizens of Louisiana to deal with Mr. Stern and Mr. Fritchey . . ."

Senator A. O. Rappelet then unveiled a plaster statue of a seal with a red ball balanced on its nose, saying Fritchey and Stern are "the lowest type of scoundrels and polecats on the face of the earth—Dam Yankees who came here to make fun of our people . . .

"They should get the hell out of the State of Louisiana and stay out."

Fritchey, a Pulitzer prizewinner on the Cleveland Press joined the Item in 1944.

[The Associated Press reported that Senator Brooks Oliver, a member of the committee, introduced a bill tonight to impose a $3000 fine and 90 days imprisonment for failure of a newspaper to publish a reply to criticism of any person. The measure would give newspapers 10 days to print replies in the "same prominence" to "any attack or criticism regarding the character, reputation, morals, business or profession of any citizen in private, political or public life * * *."

It would apply to editorials as well as news articles.]

Washington police yesterday arrested a 47-year-old man on an Ohio warrant that charges him with being a fugitive from justice in a $15,000 embezzlement case involving shrimp shipments from Mexico.

Van Buren

Arraigned before Municipal Court Judge Armond W. Scott was Charles Van Buren of 1444 Harvard st. nw. Judge Scott set July 12 as the date for hearing on extradition. Van Buren was released under $2000 bond.

According to the Hamilton County (Cincinnati) warrant, Van Buren and Victor E. Hansen in August, 1948, described themselves as officials of a firm called "Skyway Foods, Inc."

They told prospective investors, the warrant asserts, that they needed additional money to start an operation whereby fresh shrimp would be flown into the United States from Mexico.

From one investor they received $13,000, with the remaining $2000 coming from two others, the warrant says.

Brannan Asks A 'Fair Break' For Consumer

"The consumer is not getting a fair break" under the present farm price supports program, Agriculture Secretary Charles F. Brannan told the District Young Democrats last night at Legion Hall.

"I don't think they will stand for it very long," he added.

Brannan said that most of the money spent by the Agriculture Department "could be justified as in the public national interest.

"But there are some parts of the present program I would have trouble justifying," he added, mentioning the "90 million dollars we will spend on potatoes this year and the 225 million we spent last year."

"We didn't take the Brannan plan to Congress," he told his audience. "We were told by Congress to bring up our best suggestions." His agency heads, he said, worked day and night to try to discover some plan that would be fair to all farmers, not to the "25 percent covered by the present law."

Brannan declared that "urban dwellers have as much at stake in workable farm program as the farmer," and declared he liked to talk to city people about the Administration's program."

When the farmer is not prosperous, he said, he quits buying the products of the city dweller, causing hard times in the cities. Then he gives up farming and goes to town looking for work, adding to the "employment lines and the bread lines, and making things still worse."

Bill Introduced To Extend Child Day Care in D. C.

Representative Walter K. Granger (D., Utah) yesterday introduced a bill to continue the District child day care program through June 30, 1951.

It would extend the program for one year. Present law under which the six District day care centers are operated ends June 30.

Granger's bill also would provide for the District to contract with private or public agencies for the day care service. The centers now are all operated by the Board of Public Welfare.

The measure authorizes a $100,000 appropriation of District funds for the year. To this would be added the fees paid by parents. The fees are expected to total about $18,000 this year.

The bill is slated for House District committee action Wednesday.

POINTERS for car buyers

"EASY TERMS" ARE NOT EASY

It's just plain common sense. When you buy a car on time payments, the so-called "easy" way, you will find that it is the expensive way.

You continue to pay for the extra time you take each and every month until your car is paid for. The smaller your down-payment and the longer the terms—the greater the final cost of your car.

Make your down-payment as large as you can and pay as much per month as you can comfortably afford. That's the only sound and economical way to buy a car on time-payments.

Check the full costs of "Easy" terms with your dealer. Under the GMAC Plan you are entitled to all the facts and figures.

Postal Service Cut Defended by Uttley

More than 200 postmasters were told at the opening of their three-day, tri-state convention here yesterday that the recent cut in mail deliveries was not a "rape of the postal service."

Speaking at the opening session in the Hotel Washington, Clinton B. Uttley, executive director of the Post Office's Bureau of Operations, said the slash in mail deliveries was a long needed economy measure.

"Postmaster General Donaldson has been charged with trying to rape the postal system," Uttley told the postmasters—about half of them women—from Maryland, Virginiaand West Virginia. "He merely did something that should have been done a long time ago."

Uttley said that all postmasters knew that more than 85 percent of mail was delivered on the first round under the old system. Elimination of the second delivery was a sensible economy measure, he said.

The Post Office Department has to live within its appropriation, Uttley explained, and cannot have a deficit this year. The Postmaster therefore had to put into effect some measure that would be working by July 1 to save about a 70-million-dollar cut from the department's appropriation, he added.

Postmaster Donaldson will be the chief speaker at the 7:30 p. m. convention banquet at the hotel today.

Arlington Divided Into 11 Mail Zones

Arlington County was divided into 11 zones yesterday in an effort to speed mail deliveries.

Second and third class matter—which includes newspapers, magazines and advertising matter—will be especially speeded by the new system, according to Postmaster Charles F. Simpson.

Arlington residents who notify their home town newspaper offices of their zone number may get a chance to check up on back home news one day earlier, Simpson said.

First-class (regular letter) mail and parcel post get preferential handling at the postoffice anyway, so inclusion of the zone number won't speed their delivery quite so noticeably.

However, all mail marked with the proper zone will skip one sorting operation at the postoffice, thus generally speeding up the mail operation, Simpson said.

The zones are: 1—Main office in Clarendon; 2—Eads station (Virginia Highlands and Aurora Hills area); 3—Central station (Buckingham area); 4—South station (Columbia pike and Glebe rd. area); 5—Preston-King station (Westover area); 6—Fairlington; 7—North station (Lee hwy. and Glebe rd.); 8—Arlington Farms, Arlington Hall, South Post of Fort Myer, Quarters K of Navy Annex; 9—Rosslyn station; 10—All boxes in the main postoffice; 11—Fort Myer.

The Pentagon and Navy Annex (except for Quarters K) are served by Washington, Simpson pointed out.

Manipulation?

Senate Unit Votes 'Gas' Price Probe

The Senate Judiciary Committee voted yesterday to investigate whether there is "unlawful manipulation" of gasoline prices.

Chairman Pat McCarran (D., Nev.) said the committee unanimously approved a resolution to authorize the investigation and to request $50,000 to finance it. The Senate Rules Committee and the full Senate must agree before the money becomes available.

The resolution, sponsored by Senators Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.) and Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.), declares that the "pattern" of gasoline price boosts during the last five years suggests "the possibility that forces other than normal economic factors" are involved.

It would authorize the committee to investigate postwar price boosts to determine whether there is "any unlawful manipulation of prices."

The committee also would be authorized to recommend changes in the antitrust laws or any other measures needed to "remedy any unwholesome practices which may exist in the petroleum industry."

The resolution calls for a committee report by December 31, 1950.

Hecht Official Sees Research As Store Aid

Cutting out waste through intelligent research will "jack up" lagging department store profits, Charles B. Dulcan, sr., executive vice president and general manager of the Hecht Co., said yesterday.

Emphasis on increasing volume of sales will no longer make up for "a multitude of operating sins," Dulcan declared.

The Hecht Co. executive delivered his plea for greater research budgets to more than 500 persons at the opening session of the Controllers' Congress of the National Retail Dry Goods Association at the Statler Hotel.

To destroy "profit-eating monsters," Dulcan said, controllers, the executive charged with coordinating store expenditures, will almost have to become "fanatical on this important thing called research."

At 10 a. m. today, J. C. Godwin, controller of Woodward & Lothrop's department store, will lead a session on "Visual Presentation Manual of Top Management Reports."

Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer will be the guest of honor at a luncheon at 12:30 p. m.

Captain Says He Paid $350 To Goodloe for Abortion

The Government rested its case in District Court yesterday against Dr. William A. Goodloe after an Army captain testified he paid him $350 to perform an abortion.

Dr. Goodloe is expected to take the witness stand in his own defense probably today. The case should reach the jury Wednesday.

The witness, Capt. Andrew Gleason, 40, of Ft. Belvoir, said that on November 5 he had sexual relations with Miss Gloria M. Huffman, 26, of Baltimore, and that they later decided on the operation.

The officer said that on February 4, he paid the fee to Dr. Goodloe.

He testified laughingly that when he came to take Miss Huffman home after the operation, Dr. Goodloe said: "If you need me again, don't hesitate to call on me."

Dr. Goodloe is also charged along with Miss Alice Galusha, a Peoples Drug Store employe, with attempting to bribe Miss Huffman not to be a witness. Miss Galusha is to be tried separately.

Clark W. Humphries, a Baltimore detective, testified that he arrested Miss Galusha in Baltimore after he heard her offer to pay Miss Huffman's expenses to California, where she could not be "contacted". At the time, Miss Galusha had $650 in her purse, he said.

Mrs. Bessie M. White, Dr. Goodloe's cook, said that in February, she saw Miss Huffman in a room in the physician's residence, 1836 S st. nw., for several days. Mrs. White said that she did not inquire why Miss Huffman was there but treated her as a "guest".

Earl, Masonic Leader In England Is Dead

London, June 12 (AP).—The Earl of Malmesbury, 77, founder senior grand warden of the English Free Masons, died today in a nursing home here. He had also been Masonic provincial grand master of Hampshire and the Isle of Wight since 1923.

Lord Malmesbury had been honorary treasurer of the British Anti-Socialist Union since 1917.

Firecracker Sparked Rites; Tosser Held

Mental observation was ordered yesterday for a 26-year-old former Marine who was convicted of setting off a firecracker in the middle of services in a southwest church Sunday night.

Hence Cleveland Giles, 26, 806 6th st. sw., was found guilty in Municipal Court by Judge Aubrey B. Fennell of tossing a "cherry bomb" into the Temple Church of God and Christ, 6th and H sts. sw.

The firecracker hit Deacon Bruce Marshall in the back of the head and exploded with the sound of a "cannonball," according to Rev. Samuel Kelsey, pastor.

Testimonial services were in progress at the time, 9:45 p. m., just before the church went on the air.

Deacon James Porch testified he saw Giles light a match outside the church and saw the firecracker hit Marshall.

The two deacons said they chased the defendant and caught him at Sixth and I sts. nw., where they said he admitted having thrown the firecracker "because they ganged up on me there last night."

Giles denied saying that and denied throwing the firecracker.

Police said Giles forfeited $5 on a disorderly conduct charge 30 minutes before the firecracker episode.

Defense Attorney Thomas David asked for a judgment of acquittal on the grounds that the Government had not proved the services were disrupted.

Meeting Set Tonight on Fairfax Study

The first in a series of public meetings on Fairfax County's administration will be held tonight at 8 o'clock in the Lorton School by a 21-member commission appointed recently to study the county's form of government.

The Lorton meeting will be held to give residents of Lee District an opportunity to express their views on proposed changes in the county government, according to Walter Crain, chairman of the commission.

Similar meetings are slated within the next 30 days for residents of the county's five other magisterial districts.

The purpose of the meetings, Crain said, is to determine whether county residents are satisfied with the county's present supervisor government and what, if any, changes they desire. The commission has been delegated by the county supervisors to study all forms of government available to the county under existing State laws.

Crain said that after it completes the district conclaves the commission will conduct a county-wide meeting to so obtain a cross-section of opinion on governmental problems.

Meanwhile, advocates of a county manager form of government are awaiting action by the Circuit Court on their petition for a referendum on a direct changeover to the county manager plan.

Hungary Dissolves Free Mason Lodges

Budapest, June 12 (AP).—The Interior Ministry announced tonight that Hungary's Free Mason Lodges had been dissolved.

The announcement called the lodges "the meeting places of the enemies of the People's Democratic (Communist) Republic, of capitalist elements, and of the adherents of Western imperialism."

Presbyterians Decline Aid To University

Massanetta Springs, Va., June 12 (AP).—Southern Presbyterians as a denomination declined today to give active support to the International Christian University of Japan.

Commissioners to the ninetieth General Assembly of the Presbyterians in this country voted overwhelming approval of the action of its board of world missions. The board, after studying the matter over a period of two years, decided it could not make a suggested $50,000 contribution and thus declined membership offered on the university foundation.

When the matter came to the floor of the assembly, its standing committee on the board of world missions recommended acceptance of the 19-section report, as amended.

Debate developed during the forenoon today over the question of church property, which the assembly ruled is not in the absolute ownership of the local church without reference to the parent church.

The Presbytery of Atlanta had asked guidance in the case of a church which has amended its charter to delete any reference to the Presbyterian Church, United States, and to describe its property as for the exclusive benefit of the congregation without any interest in favor of any ecclesiastical body.

The assembly ruled such a charter amendment did not mean the congregation had withdrawn from the denomination.

Bar Council Meets

Roanoke, Va., June 12 (AP).—The executive committee of the Council of the Virginia State Bar met today in Hotel Roanoke preparatory to a meeting of the full council Tuesday. President Thomas W. Sour Milk

Perhaps the worst feature of the Washington area milk strike, aside from the serious inconvenience to consumers, is the way it caught the District government off base. Although the imminence of the strike was perfectly apparent Saturday morning, seemingly nothing was done to prepare for it. Responsible city heads were either out of town or unavailable, and it was not until nearly 6 p. m.—six hours after the walkout began—that Engineer Commissioner Young was officially informed. General Young went into action fast on something that was not his affair, but his efforts hardly compensated for the neglect of his colleagues.

Most disgraceful of all was the lack of any ready plan to take care of emergency cases. At the special meeting Sunday the Commissioners took pains to see that District institutions would continue to get regular supplies of milk, and the armed forces were provided for. But private hospitals were left to fend for themselves in making their own arrangements with dairies and the union—apparently because the Commissioners sensed no responsibility for them, giving the weak excuse that the hospitals were not represented at the meeting. The real victim, of course, is the housewife with a baby to feed. She is left the almost impossible task of first obtaining a doctor's certificate, then traveling to the office of a dairy to purchase milk over the counter during specified hours. This procedure, and the total lack of consideration it implies, could scarcely have been more clumsy if the Commissioners had contrived to make it so deliberately.

All of which emphasizes the need for someone in the District government to take responsibility for notifying the Commissioners when a strike is likely to endanger the public interest. Given the parlous state of the District government, a full-fledged labor department probably would be an anomaly now, although there certainly should be one under home rule. But emergencies of this kind are not so rare that the Commissioners have the slightest excuse for being caught flat-footed. At the very least there ought to be a standard procedure for setting up priorities and for arranging with union and management to see that these priorities are met. The harried housewife is not likely to be very sympathetic with either the stand of the parties to the strike or the smug assurance of the Commissioners that when they have provided for District institutions they somehow have discharged their duty to the public.

Formosa In A Fog

Whether or not the resignation of T. V. Soong from the Nationalist Party, or Kuomintang, means what he says, only time will tell. Family ties are seldom broken in China, and Soong is the brother of the three famous Soong sisters, Mrs. Sun Yat-sen, Mrs. Chiang Kai-shek, and Mrs. H. H. Kung. The family, with its connections by marriage, is often called "the Soong dynasty," though Mrs. Sun is herself a bit of a maverick. There has lately been some murmuring in Formosa over the continued absence of Messrs. Soong and Kung, both of whom have held at one or other time most of the chief offices in the Nationalist government, and the departure of some lesser officials. To appease the murmurers, a clamp has been put on the exits, and a call to return sent to such absentees as Mr. Soong. Mr. Soong a year ago had established himself in his estate outside New York, and he has now declined the invitation to go back to Formosa. This is a rupture with the Nationalist officialdom, but not necessarily with the generalissimo, or Mrs. Chiang, or the Soong dynasty.

In the meantime the generalissimo insists that he will stay in Formosa and, if need be, die there. This declaration is to be interpreted as another desperate call upon the United States to come to his assistance. It is also a sign that the Chinese Communists are readying themselves for an external or an internal attack. Whether the do-or-die statement is seriously meant, whether it is preparatory to a getaway—the question will be answered according to experience with Chinese psychology. But an American policy on Formosa will soon have to be evolved out of the current hesitation on Japan and the islands on the way to and including the Philippines. For one of these days the generalissimo might change his tune, and offer to hand over an authority in Formosa which, in international law, is merely de facto, as Formosa is still Japanese territory, pending disposition in a peace treaty. The answer, if the request is made, would doubtless depend upon what Chiang himself was planning to do. At all events, the onus is upon the National Security Council to be ready with a policy.

Decline Of Confidence

Public confidence in the Government's loyalty program, already seriously impaired, cannot fail to suffer a further decline from the indictment of William W. Remington on a perjury charge. Whatever the merits of the charge against Mr. Remington, the indictment will be commonly interpreted as an indictment of the Loyalty Review Board which found him qualified for employment by the United States. The inference, it seems to us, is an unfair and an unreasonable one; but it will be drawn nonetheless, and we believe that the President must now reckon with it.

The loyalty program was instituted by executive order in 1947 for two purposes: (1) to protect the Government from disloyal employes; and (2) to protect loyal employes from unjust and unfounded accusations. It was intended to take the place of random, irresponsible congressional investigation and of capricious action by the heads of executive agencies. Repeatedly, however, employes cleared under the loyalty procedure have been haled before committees of Congress on charges made by Senator McCarthy or other individuals. The Tydings subcommittee has sat as a kind of super review board, as though the Loyalty Review Board were incompetent. The House Committee on Un-American Activities has done the same thing at least in respect of Mr. Remington. So has Senator Malone. And the Secretary of Commerce, although a member of the President's Cabinet, has ousted Mr. Remington in total disregard of the Loyalty Review Board.

How can the public be expected to have faith in loyalty procedures that are flouted by the legislative and executive branches of the Government alike? We think that the diminution of confidence cannot now be arrested by patchwork. The idea, reportedly entertained by the President, of adding some new members to the Loyalty Review Board to restudy the records of the 81 employes accused by Senator McCarthy seems to us wholly inadequate. The question is not whether Seth Richardson and his colleagues have faithfully executed the program assigned to them; their integrity and devotion are beyond any reasonable doubt. The question is whether the program itself is a satisfactory one.

What is needed to answer this question, in our judgment, is a study of the whole situation by an impartial board of experienced, distinguished and universally respected citizens. In the atmosphere of anxiety and suspicion that now prevails, only a program indorsed by such a body can win full public confidence. Only such a body can cut through the politically motivated charges and countercharges and report authoritatively on the state of our internal security. This is peculiarly the kind of task which a special commission, rather than any of the regular instrumentalities of government, can perform effectively.

Amerasian Smells

Well, what Walt Whitman called "faint hints and indirections" of dirty business in connection with the Amerasia case have been withdrawn from the reputations of President Truman, Mr. Hull, and now Mr. Forrestal. It appears that the President moved promptly, and to the accompaniment of sundry expletives, when the facts were brought to his attention, and rebutted the idea of postponing judicial proceedings. This suggestion, to be sure, had been made by Mr. Forrestal. But his motives were pitched on the highest plane—namely, reasons of state. At that time the United States and the Soviet Union, with other countries, were in consultation on the establishment of the United Nations. Mr. Forrestal felt that the President should be informed of the complications of trying a man suspected of intimacy with Russian officials, when those officials represented a country which was then an ally, and when, moreover, Secretary Stettinius was trying to get on intimate terms with Mr. Molotov. Any other inference from Mr. Forrestal's connection with the case is just as nauseating as the one that Mr. Hull had a Communist up his sleeve to set up as the Tito of Japan.

Indirect Lobbying

The Lobby Investigating Committee has begun a fruitful inquiry into the activities of corporations designed to influence legislation. Questionnaires have gone out to 166 large corporations asking for data on travel expenses of their representatives to and from Washington, maintenance of Washington offices, contributions to lobbying organizations and so forth. Apparently the committee is trying to get a comprehensive view of how big corporations operate behind the scenes to secure favorable legislation and to head off bills regarded as inimical to their interests. In many instances indirect lobbying of this sort may be more important than the work of registered lobbyists on Capitol Hill.

On the basis of its findings the committee will consider whether the present lobbying act should be extended to cover the activities of business concerns intended to influence public opinion. We suspect that there will be strong support for a general proposal of that sort. This newspaper has consistently urged that the people have a right to know the sources of funds spent to influence public opinion. Of course, that principle applies as strongly to other concerns as to business groups engaged in lobbying. Certainly the problem is not limited to business corporations. Democratic principles demand that any regulation of indirect lobbying be also applied to labor unions and propaganda associations whether or not they are corporations in legal form.

Indeed, the propagandizing under false colors about which the public is most concerned these days is that perpetrated by the Communists and their fellow travelers. The crocodile tears shed by the Communists over liberal causes and their duplicity in collecting funds for such causes and using them to broadcast lies from Moscow would be readily exposed by a law requiring detailed financial reports from all organizations seeking to influence public opinion. To limit the regulation of indirect lobbying to business concerns would be to ignore the most pressing need for legislation in this field.

Judicial Dumping

Our courts have been notoriously backward in their public relations, and in none of them is this failing more conspicuous than in the Supreme Court of the United States. Last week, for example, that high tribunal dumped 18 opinions into the lap of bewildered newspaper and radio reporters. Some of these opinions were of great importance, including those dealing with equal rights under the Fourteenth Amendment, the marginal-sea cases, and the decision as to how far the Constitution follows the flag in protecting aliens who come under American military jurisdiction in wartime. It was utterly impossible for the newsmen to read and digest so many opinions in a few hours, and if they could have done so most newspapers would have had great difficulty in giving adequate coverage to so large an output.

Such a heavy accumulation of cases usually occurs only at the end of the term. But that is serious enough, for the justices have a habit of putting off until the last opinion day some of the most troublesome and important cases. The result is that some momentous decisions go almost unnoticed by the public. Perhaps it is of no concern to the court whether its output is properly communicated to the people. Yet we do not see how any body in a democratic land could take such an attitude, and this seems to apply especially to the Supreme Court, which, lacking both purse and sword, is dependent upon the acceptance of its rulings by public opinion.

Even at the cost of some inconvenience to itself, we should think the court would abandon its dumping practice and regulate the flow of its opinions to the public more evenly. It is difficult to see how any harm could be done by such a policy, and it would certainly facilitate understanding of the court and its decisions on the part of the public.

Data On Weapons

The big news in Washington—and indeed, in the Western World—is the new defensive military weapons the United States expects to have shortly. How the facts as to these weapons are presented will determine in large degree whether the effect in western Europe will be reassuring or alarming. For that reason it is imperative that there be a coordinated governmental policy to guard against both saber-rattling and complacency.

What is needed is a determination of just what should and what should not be said about the weapons. Obviously the technical details must be excluded. Beyond this, the announcements ought to be such as to reassure our allies in western Europe without overstating the case or inducing them to lie down on the job of furnishing their share of military defense before the weapons are available. Further stress on the defensive aspect of the weapons can avoid unnecessary provocation of Russia. Obviously, too, now that the announcement has been made, it is essential that there be concentrated effort in industry to cut down the time lag in production.

All this calls for a decision by the President in company with the Cabinet. It must be realized that information on the new weapons is a vital instrument of foreign policy, of great psychological as well as practical meaning. A matter of such transcendent importance should not be left to either catch-as-can disclosure out of perspective, or to the kind of frustrating and senseless secrecy that has prevailed on the hydrogen bomb.

Triumph For Hogan

There is a special sort of triumph in the efforts of a former champion who conquers adversity to win again. Ben Hogan's comeback to win the National Open golf championship at Ardmore, Pa., Sunday has seldom, if ever, been equaled in sports history. Two years ago Hogan was sitting on top of the world, having just won the National Open for the first time at Los Angeles. A year later he was slowly convalescing from an automobile accident which had endangered his life and left in the balance the question whether he would ever play again. Not only did he play again, beginning slowly and building to a crescendo, but his game Sunday at Ardmore and the week before at The Washington Post National Celebrities tournament here left no doubt that he is the premier golfer in the United States today.

Unlike other sports such as baseball calling for teamwork, golf proficiency is a peculiarly individual matter, depending on the utmost refinement in coordination and timing. Hogan has this refinement again; he wanted no sympathy from the spectators Sunday and he competed on equal ground despite the strain of two 18-hole rounds the previous day. In the process of his recovery a more human Hogan also has emerged. He seems to have lost the old sourness and hardness often associated with professional golfers, and when Attorney General McGrath presented the citation to him at the National Celebrities Tournament he was visibly touched. The vicissitudes he has weathered are hardly to be recommended as training, but they illustrate the magnitude of his discipline and achievement.

Cooperative Apartments

With the current publicity and confusion on "co-op" apartments perhaps this is the time to answer the question "When is a co-op not a co-op?"

A genuine cooperative of the type affiliated with the Cooperative League of the United States and locally with the Potomac Cooperative Federation must be an organization set up by, in the interest of, and for the users of the service. The word cooperative has been very badly misused. Many so-called cooperative apartment projects have been created which are not genuine cooperatives in spirit, although they may meet part of the letter of the law for cooperative structure.

1. A cooperative is not a cooperative when it is organized to unload real estate and is instigated either by the owner or an agent of the owner.

2. A cooperative is not a cooperative when it is used to circumvent the rent control laws.

3. A cooperative is not a cooperative when it is used to evict duly accredited tenants of an apartment if the sole purpose of the organization of the cooperative is to allow someone else to replace a legitimate tenant.

A genuine cooperative must be organized for the occupants of the building and by the occupants of a building and not for and by a real estate speculator or an owner who wants to capitalize on the housing shortage by taking advantage of the tenants.

There are many genuine cooperatives in the field of housing which have been to the advantage of the occupants and members of the cooperative. It is too bad that the current flurry over an attempt of an owner to sell a property "in pieces" at a figure he could probably not get in "one lump" should create a bad name for legitimate cooperatives created in the interest of their member owners.

World Government Now

I am a member of United World Federalists, an organization that presents a program to prevent war through strengthening the United Nations. Its purpose is just that, nothing more.

As I follow the news day by day I note the many ways in which people, great and small, are recognzing the fact that there can be no security without an international government to legislate, interpret and enforce law.

History shows that no community has ever succeeded in keeping peace by any other means, and the world is a community just as are towns, states and nations. No governmental system is easy to establish or to maintain, but it is far more reasonable to attempt it than to rely on the impossible, namely, to keep peace without order.

It has been said that progress comes as a result of crisis—surely today is ripe for progress. We are buying time by building armed might. What good will the time be to us if we fail to use it constructively?

There are some leaders among us who have the courage, and I believe, political astuteness, to state these facts. Senator Walter H. Judd, in a speech he gave in Baltimore on June 5, said: "I am going to borrow a slogan from one of the great industries of my State of Minnesota, 'Eventually, Why Not Now?'" He was referring, of course, to world government. Initiative on the part of the United States would mean propaganda advantage beyond measure. We may be on our way, but I am fascinated and terrified watching to see if we will be in time.

"Right To Strike"

It would appear from the June 10 editorial in The Washington Post that neither George Harrison (president of the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks), the Post editor nor Mr. Peter F. Drucker has quite become aware of the basic reason why strikes against public utilities such as railways, or companies engaged in supplying light, heat, power or communications to the public are properly outlawed.

Each seems to be agreed that strikes against the operations of Government are outside the pale.

Strikes against the operation of public utilities are in the same category for the very sound reason that none of these may carry on their lawful operations except by the use of a portion of a governmental function—to wit: the right of eminent domain—the power to take private property on the payment of just compensation.

All public utilities thus use a portion of constitutional governmental authority. Though the Federal Government has full constitutional authority to regulate "commerce among the States" it is to be regretted that it has not yet definitely provided in clear terms just what acts are unlawful with respect to such commerce, nor provided penalties for forbidden acts. As to strikes not directly related to interstate commerce, such may with accommodating propriety be left to the several States.

NATHAN BOONE WILLIAMS.

Deserving Peace

As this cold war continues, making us more and more aware that peace is no more on the face of the earth, the sad question comes before us: Do we deserve real peace? Have we shown such thankfulness for our unprecedented blessings as to indicate we would make proper use of universal peace if we had it? Would universal peace, today, result in our working all the harder to hasten the coming of the Kingdom of Heaven, or would it make us even more soft and careless morally, thereby bringing real human progress—progress in character of men and nations—to a standstill, and even a reversal?

These are the things men almost never think about when they wish for universal peace. The United Nations did not start off with even a short prayer and thanksgiving to God for the coming of peace after the greatest war in history. Why not? Because we wished to please the antireligious member more than we wished to please God.

Nevertheless, we are always blessed as much as we deserve. Hence, in so far as we turn even now, to God, with all our hearts and minds, we shall receive mercy, and our time of suffering shall be shortened.

Rent Control End

I'm a renter—with only one rent increase in the same flat since 1936. And I'll be hurt by repeal of rent control. However, I firmly believe that this law was only justified, if at all, by war. It even prevents a renter from making a fair deal with his landlord by mutual agreement. And it deprives property owners of legitimate peacetime use of their possessions.

Sure, rents will be raised! Haven't they been submerged by this law? But rents on places newly rented since the law went into effect are sky high and will settle down. Those who fear a rent rise are now enjoying lower rents than they deserve.

Juvenile Court Judge

As the supervisor of a large staff of workers who regularly appear in the Juvenile Court I have had most favorable reports on Judge Cockrill's handling of cases and her sympathetic attitude and fairness in dealing with children and adults.

Several staff members had specifically commented long before the present controversy that the entire tone and conduct of the court hearings have been vastly improved under Judge Cockrill.

In my official capacity I have observed Judge Cockrill on the bench. As a trained social worker with many years experience in dealing with the court I can say that Judge Cockrill's manner of conducting hearings was in no way punitive nor was the atmosphere of the court hostile. SOCIAL WORKER.

Four boys, ranging in ages from 14 to 18 years, who broke into a grocery store took about $25 worth of merchandise. It was a first offense for them all, and all came from good families. The police rounded them up in a few days because they had too many cigarettes.

The 18-year-old lad was turned over to the District Court. I knew the boy's father quite well and I contacted him and advised the lad to plead guilty. I discussed the case with the United States attorney handling the case asking that the lad be put on probation. The court gave him two years and probation.

I went to the manager of a chain grocery corporation and presented a picture of the case. He was a man of understanding and he said "I'll take the boy at $18 a week to start with."

This was less than a year ago. This boy is now earning $45 a week and holding an executive position with the corporation.

I said to the boy: "This gives you a chance to win back your lost esteem. Make yourself useful and do not watch the clock."

The other three boys went to the reform school. The juvenile judge does not have the understanding that she needs.

The present controversy at the Juvenile Court is confusing to everyone. As a professional person appearing before Judge Cockrill regularly I am particularly concerned with the charge that the atmosphere in the court room is punitive and hostile.

In a Juvenile Court the relationships between the judge and persons appearing before her must be humane and understanding but at the same time show strength and dignity. When I have been present in the court Judge Cockrill achieved that fine balance and I have found the atmosphere improved in contrast to that previously existing.

Basing Point Perplexity

By Marquis Childs

Whether To Veto

ONCE AGAIN a struggle is being waged around the White House over an economic issue that casts a much longer shadow than is generally realized. Once more the telegrams and letters are raining down on the President who must, when all the memoranda are written and the arguments reviewed, make the final decision.

This time is is the basing point bill which Mr. Truman must sign or veto. It involves a kind of economics so complicated that it has been almost entirely ignored in the press.

The measure, passed by the Senate by a vote of 43 to 27, permits manufacturers to fix a base price that includes the freight charges from a given point, usually the city in which the major part of the industry is concentrated. Thus, all buyers must pay the same price whether they are 2,000 miles away or right next door to the factory.

Those in favor of legalizing the basing point system say that all the bill does is approve a practice already widespread in industry, and thereby it ends legal and other confusions. Most respectable and seemingly disinterested proponent of the bill is Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney of Wyoming. O'Mahoney has through most of his long congressional career fought the "trusts" and the rise of monopoly concentration and gigantism in finance and industry. Before World War II he headed the joint Senate-House Committee that dug deep into the structure of American business.

On the other side are most of the Democrats who follow the trustbusting line. They have argued long and with thorough and skillful documentation that such a measure would destroy price competition and shoot the antitrust laws full of holes. It seems to me hard to refute these arguments unless you simply admit that price competition is in effect eliminated over wide areas anyway and so why not regularize it and end the uncertainty that business lives under today.

THE OPPOSITION takes on an interesting geographical coloration. Senators from the South and West who want to attract industry and end the levy of the freight rates that keeps their States in a semi-colonial status lined up against "bigness" and the theory of inevitable concentration in the East.

One of the active opponents of the measure was Senator Russell Long of Louisiana. In young Long's arguments were many echoes of his father, the late Huey, who fought with fiery effectiveness against the big, wicked corporations that were squeezing the poor folk back in the canebrakes. One of the most effective speeches against the basing point system was made by Senator Lister Hill of Alabama.

Senator Estes Kefauver of Tennessee also did a thorough job on the opposition side. As in the fight on the Kerr natural gas bill, Senator Paul Douglas of Illinois carried a heavy load, and so did Senator Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota.

The economic issue on the basing point bill is nothing like as clear and simple as it was with respect to the Kerr bill. The same opposition, with the exception of many of the Southerners, declared that passage of the Kerr bill would mean an increase in the gas bills in millions of households in Northern cities. Senator Kerr and his allies could and did deny this, but they could not guarantee that it would not happen.

DURING the period when the same kind of pulling and hauling was going on over the Kerr bill, the predictions were that the President would in the showdown sign it. Those predictions were wrong, although it appears that only as the result of a last-minute change of heart did the President finally arrive at a veto.

This time the advance indications are for a veto, and they could be just as wrong as in the other instance. The same groups that opposed the Kerr bill are now urging the President to turn down the basing point measure. Among them are the trade unions, farm organizations, and some small business associations. They have thus far produced a volume of protest much greater than the favorable mail and telegrams.

But there are influential advocates who want Mr. Truman to sign. One of them is Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer. And the fact that O'Mahoney is for the bill can hardly be ignored.

That ancient story about the farm hand who did fine at every kind of hard and demanding task until he was put to sorting the good potatoes from the bad may apply to the job of President. It's the decisions that really get you down. And the President's own party is so split that he can't ordinarily fall back on party regularity. But in this case most of the Democrats, certainly the Truman Democrats, are on the opposition side.

Women Candidates

Why not overturn the whole welter of party conventions, and start a movement to write in, at the next presidential election, the names of Margaret Chase Smith and Helen Gahagan Douglas, with the understanding that Chase Going Woodhouse will be their Secretary of State? If we are, in fact, a free people, then why must we continue to be ridden by the incubus of organized political mediocrity?

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

After Japan What Then?

AS THE time draws near for making a Japanese peace treaty it is necessary to make big decisions about the American strategic position in the Pacific. If we are leaving Japan, where can we and should we establish the bases of our power in the Far East?

Lippmann

This question has not been answered when we say that our defensive line in the Pacific runs from Japan through Okinawa to the Philippines. It is one thing to say that we shall regard a hostile act against this line as an act of war against the United States. It does not follow at all that we should or that we could fortify and garrison this whole line, and that we must defend Japan as we do Alaska, or Okinawa as we do Hawaii.

There are many places in the world which we have guaranteed, explicitly or implicitly, and yet we are not committed to defend them. West Berlin and Vienna are two striking examples of places that are protected by a guarantee though they are not actually defended nor are they in fact defensible. When Japan has a peace treaty and the American forces leave, the protection of Japan will consist of an international, and therefore also an American, guarantee. The actual defense of Japan will—once the fog clears away—be acknowledged to be the responsibility of the Japanese. They will have to be allowed to rearm to meet that responsibility and they will probably have to be given defensive weapons.

THE FOG of the last war has cleared away enough to cause us to realize that Japan and Okinawa are military liabilities. Japan is within range of the fastest fighter planes in Siberia, and no military installation could be protected with any reasonable certainty against atomic bombardment. Okinawa is even worse than Japan. For it is not only a small island and also under the guns of the mainland but it has such vile and dangerous weather that neither ships nor planes can be based upon it securely.

It used to be said that Japan and Okinawa, or Formosa if we had occupied it, would be "unsinkable aircraft carriers." We now realize that these fixed bases,—right near the Asiatic mainland and very far from the American homeland—are indeed unsinkable aircraft carriers without engines and without rudders anchored just where they can most easily be made unusable and uninhabitable. The best military opinion now is that these off-shore islands are worse than useless as American bases, that they are in fact not bases at all but traps, and that the right way to deal with these off-shore islands is to "deny" them to the enemy in case of war. At best this can be done by neutralization, guaranteed by the powers and enforced by the rearmament of Japan, and at worst, if their neutrality is violated, by raiding tactics.

ALL OF this leads up to the original question which is where in the Far East we can and should establish the bases of our power. If Japan is to be guaranteed but not defended, where do we set up the defenses and generate the power to make good the guarantee?

By treaty and by law the place in the Far East where our rights are beyond question is the Philippines. There the right to bases is settled and no issue can be raised by anyone if we decide to develop those rights. The question is whether bases in the Philippines are strategically sound and desirable.

AS COMPARED with Japan and Okinawa bases in the Philippines are not too near the centers of military power on the Asiatic mainland—that is to say, not too near to Soviet Siberia and to North China. The Philippine Islands are also widely spread out, which in the air age is a great insurance against the one surprise knockout blow.

Moreover, the sea connections between the Philippines and the United States are secure—now that the mandated islands are in American hands. The Philippines were a military liability in the Second World War because the Japanese held the islands which cut them off from the United States. They are now a strategic asset because, apart from the chance of submarine raiding, there is no doubt that any American force in the Philippines can be supplied and reinforced.

THE PHILIPPINE Islands lie in the center of one of the great disputed areas of the globe. Behind them, so to speak, lie the Netherlands Indies and then Australia and New Zealand. In face of them lie South China and Indo-China and Thailand. Near them across the South China Sea are Malaya and Singapore which, on the gloomiest estimate, should always be tenable by the British as a military position.

There are, therefore, many reasons for thinking that in the vast confusion of events and of American policy in the Far East, the wisest move we could make would be a firm decision to develop a position of power in the Philippines. This would be the corollary to a Japanese peace treaty and an American withdrawal from Japan. It is also a more effective and a less embarrassing and dangerous way of accomplishing the main purposes which are supposed to be served by staying entangled with Chiang in Formosa, by meddling and muddling a little with Bao Dai in Indo-China.

For none of these petty measures offers any prospect of altering the balance of power in the Far East or of preserving some important measure of American and Western influence in eastern Asia.

But a decision to use the American base rights in the Philippines to establish a strong position would provide that element of legitimate power which is disappearing in the spreading anarchy of Southeast Asia. This action would be recognized in Asia and throughout the world as a major event, and not mere paltering and trifling with great issues. And since no other power could regard the act as touching its vested or its vital interests, or as provocative and menacing, it would be an act of stabilization and of peace.

Unrest Is Laid to Red 'Huks'

by a fairly broad political grouping. Luis Taruc, the best-known of its leaders, did not become a Communist until 1946. Today the leadership is entirely in Communist hands. It draws its support from a loosely organized peasant union reputed to have 200,000 members among the six million peasants who crowd the six central provinces of Luzon—nearly a third of the total population—who have grown increasingly intolerant of pauperism, subjection to usurers, and an economic system from which they can never gain.

The Huks themselves, however, are a surprisingly small force, estimated at not more than 15,000. They have recently changed their name, Chinese style, to People's Liberation Army. Partly because it suited them and partly under pressure, they have shifted some forces in the last two months from Central Luzon, northeastward to the Cagayan Valley, and southward to the Bicol peninsula, and by boat to some of the nearby Visayan islands.

They fight with the same tactics employed in China, and by their opposite numbers in Malaya. In a country full of hills and recesses, it is the kind of fight that can be carried on for as long as the social problems rooted in it remain unresolved.

The fact seems to be that although they are heavily outnumbered and are inferior in firepower, the Huks are capable of defying suppression indefinitely. On the other hand, it seems equally to be the fact right now that the Huks are not capable of directly overthrowing the present government.

The Huks employ their own brand of terrorism, but they operate basically like any guerilla force that depends on a large measure of popular support in the countryside. Hence, when they raid towns, they confine their looting as a rule to the Chinese shops, fair game by Filipino rules, and deal correctly with the ordinary people, especially the women.

By all accounts, the anti-Huk forces are regarded in the villages as more of a scourge than the Huks. The public prints are full of reports of excesses committed by constabulary and civil guards in the name of fighting the Communists.

"Killing a Huk," said Senator Esteban Abada, of the Liberal majority, in a public speech here, "is an excuse for murder. A constabulary man murders an innocent civilian and then reports he killed a Huk. Then he gets a commendation. That is what obtains at present in Central Luzon. Constabulary operations are the cause of too much unrest in Central Luzon."

These practices, and other depredations by official and quasi-official forces, have created the feeling among people that the Huks somehow embody social virtue while the government and its people are capable only of brutal excesses. This is the kind of feeling from which governments fall.

The Filipino Huks command political strength far beyond their numbers. They have a powerful ally across the China Sea. They expect him to be before long in neighboring Formosa. They expect help, indeed, like many non-Chinese Communists in Asia, they may expect more help than they will want. It is not without significance that the Huk leader, Luis Taruc, is already reported to be a little too Nationalist and perhaps too idealistic to suit the harder-boiled Stalinist leaders Balgos and Cappadocio, who recently left Manila to join the forces in the hills.

But the main source of Huk strength lies in the failure of anyone else to come to grips with the peasants' problems. Filipino politicians tell you they have a plan on the law books to buy up hacienda land for the farmers. "But," they shrug helplessly, "it would cost a billion dollars." When land deals are made, as in the recent notorious Buenavista case, the occasion is made one for wholesale looting by unscrupulous businessmen and conniving politicians.

The Philippines have large land areas awaiting development. There are plans, likewise on the law books, for resettlement projects. But these have failed to come to much. Private capital, which waxes fat on land and commodity speculation in the Philippines, is not anxious to go into the slower, harder, less profitable business of large-scale development. There is no public capital and, again, Filipino politicians shrug and wonder if American money might not be made available for the purpose.

The soberest students of the situation here believe that the danger lies not in a successful Huk onslaught but in the administrative, financial, and political breakdown of the government. Barring heroic measures, they foresee such a breakdown in a year, perhaps in two. In that situation, the Huks will certainly be in a position to contend with other fragmented political armed groups for control of different areas of the country.

In view of the fact that such groups, which already exist in at least four provinces, are the most reactionary kind of political thugs, the Communist advantage will be obvious. Great masses of people will be ready to buy safety by accepting Communist rule. A great many of them, too many of them, already are.

A Communication

REA Power Lines In South Carolina

By S. C. McMeekin

President, South Carolina Electric & Gas Co.

ON JUNE 2 you published a letter from REA Administrator Claude Wickard in answer to a full page ad which this company ran in your paper on May 21 charging a misuse of Federal funds by the Rural Electrification Administration in authorizing a loan of $7,595,500 for the construction of system of transmission lines in South Carolina. The same issue had an editorial entitled, "Coooperative Power," in which you suported the position taken by Mr. Wickard.

So that your readers will have a chance to judge the merits of this matter by hearing what Mr. Wickard saw fit to leave out of his statement, I am asking that you publish this letter. I am frankly amazed that a public official holding such a responsible position as Mr. Wickard would issue such misleading statements and conceal so many facts from the public.

Mr. Wickard's letter sets forth that REA's policy has been to make loans to finance transmission and generation facilities for cooperatives where one of two conditions exist: "Either that an adequate and dependable supply of wholesale power is not available to meet the cooperatives' needs, or that a saving can be achieved in the cost of power to rural consumers."

We have no quarrel with REA's policy as stated by Mr. Wickard, but we do take strong exception to Mr. Wickard's assertion that both of his stated requirements were satisfied in his granting a loan of $7,595,500 for the construction of transmission lines in South Carolina.

ON THE point of the adequacy of existing facilities, Mr. Wickard quotes a letter from Mr. Winchester Smith of the South Carolina Public Service Commission declaring facilities in the area we serve to be inadequate. What Mr. Wickard fails to disclose is that this was Mr. Smith's personal opinion only, and was not a finding of the commission. In fact, other members of the commission wired Mr. Wickard to that effect.

The fact is that the commission just prior to Mr. Smith's letter made a finding that the company's facilities were adequate. We are proud of our record. We have not only adequately served all of our customers, including the 14 co-ops in our area, but have supplied power to neighboring companies during emergencies. Our area is one of the few in America that did not have a power shortage or a lack of transmission facilities during the trying war years or since the war and we are prepared for the future. Our service area is laced with a network of high voltage transmission lines.

To take this question out of the realm of opinion, we repeatedly offered to pay the expenses of reputable and disinterested engineers to determine for REA whether we had adequate facilities. We again make this offer. We again ask for a public hearing to determine the facts regarding the adequacy of our facitities which Mr. Wickard has chosen to ignore.

ON THE question of the cost of power to rural customers, Mr. Wickard again conceals those facts which cast doubt upon the correctness of his decision to extend the loan. Mr. Wickard states: "This loan will bring about a saving averaging more than a quarter of a million dollars annually over the life of the loan for farmers of the State under rates they have been paying."

What Mr. Wickard bases this estimate on he fails to disclose. Evidently he has made an arbitrary guess of the power consumption of the co-ops projected over the next 35 years, a piece of amazing clairvoyance which seems wasted if not more generally used. If his calculations are based on the rate of 6.2 mills per kilowatt hour which the co-ops are to pay for power under the loan agreement (6 mills plus two-tenths of a mill management fee to the Central Co-op), why did he not compute the saving on the basis of the 5½ mill rate the cooperatives are now receiving from us? Surely the saving would be greater as the rate is lower.

Mr. Wickard says that the 5½ mill rate now in effect was not offered until the day after our ad of May 21. This statement is not true. The rate was offered in September, 1949. Because the offer was ignored, we placed it into effect anyway to bring the issue to public attention in a desperate effort to prevent the construction of the needless duplicating lines, which could be used to destroy our company.

Mr. Wickard states that the proposed transmission system will bring electric service for the first time to approximately 25,000 additional rural families. We repeat our assertion that the proposed lines will not bring electric service to a single additional rural home in South Carolina. Nor will our present co-op customers receive a single kilowatt-hour of power over this system that could not be had from our existing facilities.

WHICH brings us to Mr. Wickard's flat statement: "No duplication of lines is involved," which he then seemingly contradicts by saying: "Only about one fourth of the co-op lines will parallel the commercial utility facilities."

The question then is Mr. Wickard's definition of duplicating and parallel lines. He says: "When a single lane highway becomes so overcrowded that it cannot carry the traffic the addition of another lane may be 'paralleling' but it cannot be classed as 'duplication'."

We thus get back to the adequacy of our facilities to serve the co-op load which was discussed above. Just one of our large generators could supply all of the rural co-op power needs in the State of South Carolina. Only about 1 percent of our revenue is derived from supplying co-ops. Does this sound like our lines are "overcrowded"? While the loss of the co-op load would not materially hurt our company, it is the use of these lines for purposes other than supplying the co-ops to which we object. Why does Mr. Wickard refuse to write into the contracts that the lines will be used only to supply REA co-ops?

One more important point among many misrepresentations in Mr. Wickard's letter. He says: "During the time that REA had the co-ops' application under consideration power companies were given many opportunities to present their case." We went to Washington several times when we heard about the proposed transmission system. An exploratory conference was held in April, 1948. Mr. Wickard promised we would be granted a hearin, before a loan was made. On Saturday, December 17, 1948, we received a wire asking us to be in Washington on Tuesday, December 21, to discuss rates and service. While the notice was unreasonably short, and we did not know just what was expected of us, we went to Washington. This meeting is what we in this company call the "Moscow hearing," because it was held behind closed doors. We personally invited the press to appear so that what transpired would be known to the public. But REA officials ordered the press from the room before the hearing was allowed to begin.

COULD IT BE that Mr. Wickard considers this star chamber proceeding what he terms "many opportunities to present our case." We have asked many times for an open hearing. We ask for one now before construction starts. What has Mr. Wickard to conceal that he refuses to air the facts at a hearing open to the public and press?

We feel that the public is entitled to know the manner in which REA funds appropriated for a specific purpose are being used. Santee-Cooper will acquire a duplicating transmission system which its manager has announced many times will be used not just to serve co-ops, but to take other customers away from our company contrary to the declared policy of REA. Should we take this lying down?

Lastly, Mr. Wickard contends that it is too late to withhold the loan. That's like saying the body still has life in it but we must go ahead with the burial because all funeral arrangements have been made.

Peurifoy Assails Fund Riders

have to be abolished, in addition to 850 in the domestic service (mainly in this city) under the two riders. In addition, several hundred employes in international information (Voice of America) would have to be fired, but Peurifoy didn't estimate the number. He did say, however, that the department would have $1,500,000 less available for salaries, enough to pay the salaries of more than 400 persons. He warned:

"During this period, when the information and educational program is playing such a singular role in the cold war against communistic influence, it is not strategically sound to curtail our resources for this endeavor."

If present plans go through, the Senate committee will back the principle of the Taber-Thomas rider but reject the Jensen rider to limit most agencies to the filling of only one of every 10 vacated jobs. Taber-Thomas would force many agencies to make 10 percent personnel cuts.

Under Taber-Thomas, Peurifoy estimated the department would have to fire more than 2000 employes. He said 1400 of these would be in the foreign service, and about 600 here in the domestic service.

On top of that, the department already has taken steps to reduce its domestic service by 141 employes, and several hundred would have to be laid off on the Voice of America project. The actual number of State jobs threatened by Taber-Thomas would be closer to 2500 than 2000.

In other developments, the Senate approved an amendment by Senator Langer (R., N. D.) that would speed up longevity promotions for clerks in the Customs Service and Immigration inspectors. The amendment would allow these employes to count all prior Federal service toward the above-the-grade raises. The National Customs Service Association pushed the provision.

Three agencies are ready with recommendations that the President veto the promotion credit bill for World War II veterans in the postal service. But this is an election year and the President may ignore the advice.

National Bank Votes Split-up, Capital Boost

By S. Oliver Goodman

Stockholders of the National Bank of Washington at a special meeting yesterday unanimously approved a proposal to split stock 10-for-1 and to double capital.

On the local exchange yesterday, bid price on the bank's stock was $325 a share with no offerings, indicating the new stock was worth at least $32.50 a share. The rights were bid $10 each on a when-issued basis.

As announced previously by Barnum L. Colton, president of the city's fourth largest bank, present par value of capital stock will be changed from $100 a share to $10 a share and 10 shares will be issued for each share outstanding.

Following this step, the outstanding stock will be increased 100 percent by giving each shareholder the right to subscribe on a share-for-share basis at $20 a share for the additional 105,000 shares. The rights were mailed yesterday to stockholders and will expire at 2 p. m. on July 7.

After completion of the recapitalization, the bank will have outstanding 210,000 shares with a par value of $10 a share. Along with $2,100,000 surplus, this will make a capital structure of $4,200,000.

The recapitalization is expected to result in broader public participation in the bank's ownership, a more flexible market for stockholders and provide a means for stepping-up loans.

CONTRACT: A wartime spray device used in the Pacific Islands has been adapted for civilian use by the Air-O-Spray Corp. of Washington, President Charles C. Shea announced yesterday. The firm has contracted with Power Products Corp. of Grafton, Wisc., for the manufacture of the dispenser which looks like a small flashlight.

NEW RECORD: Savings association devoted a higher share of their total mortgage volume to the financing of new home construction in 1949 than in any previous year, the United States Savings and Loan League disclosed today. A breakdown of mortgage loans made by savings associations last year revealed that 30 percent, or $1,077,300,000, went to finance the building of new homes, out of an over-all mortgage total of $3,591,000,000. The total advanced on new construction was a sharp rise over the amount loaned for this purpose in 1948.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, June 12 +.—All commodities except new crop soybeans dropped in an active trade on the Board of Trade today. In contrast with the new crop beans, the July contract, representing the old crop, wound up with the largest loss on the boards.

The market hinted at its direction by getting off to a weak start. Two or three minor rallies developed during the day, but only in the case of deferred soybean deliveries were the rallies able to bring prices back to the previous close.

Wheat ended 1 to 2 cents lower, corn 1¾-1¾ lower, oats 1¾-2⅛ lower, rye 1¾-1½ lower, soybeans 5¼ lower to ¾ higher and lard 25 to 35 cents a hundred pounds lower.

Master Urges Georgia Rail Case Be Killed

A Supreme Court special master yesterday pretty thoroughly knocked down the State of Georgia's contention that Northern railroads have been conspiring to fix discriminatory freight rates against the South.

Lloyd K. Garrison, named by the court to look into the facts of Georgia's charges that rate differentials made the South a "colonial dependency" of the wealthier North, recommended that the court throw out Georgia's complaint.

But at the same time, Garrison did find that some railroad practices, handled through the Association of American Railroads, do "violate the antitrust laws because they are designed to check rate reductions or induce freight increases."

The master, a former War Labor Board chairman now practicing law, turned out a 7900-word report based on 36-volume record of some 12,000 words.

No Such Conspiracy Found

Garrison said "no conspiracy such as Georgia pictured was established" and he found that "no sectional considerations or intent to discriminate against any region, or to freeze the rate structure, motivated the creation" of the railroad association. He said the association acted in a "noncoercive" manner.

On the anti-trust law question, Garrison said certain association practices are illegal "because they are not needed for the purpose of the Interstate Commerce Act . . ."

The Georgia complaint was filed in the Supreme Court in June, 1944, by the then Governor, Ellis Arnall. It asked for an injunction against the railroads under the antitrust laws. Arnall charged that the alleged conspiracy created "an artificial toll bridge across which the products of Southern manufacture seeking access to northern markets were compelled to pass."

Refers to Bulwinkle Law

Garrison, who was named by the court in December, 1947, noted that certain regional rate agreements were now before the ICC under terms of the Bulwinkle law passed by Congress in 1948. This measure granted certain antitrust exemptions in regard to rates submitted to and approved by the ICC. Agreements already have been approved for western and eastern areas and a southern agreement is pending, an AAR spokesman said last night.

Garrison suggested that further action by the court be held up pending outcome of a Government suit against the railroad group, filed in Nebraska. The Government seeks dissolution of the AAR.

The court a week ago, on the last day of the term, ordered Garrison's report received and gave all parties 90 days to file exceptions or objections.

Truman Is Still Radio Farmer, He Tells Group

President Truman told a group of radio farm directors yesterday that he still listens to farm broadcasts nearly every morning at 5:30 o'clock.

Members of the National Association of Radio Farm Directors, WLW, Cincinnati, called at the White House to pay their respects headed by Roy Battles of station to the President.

Mr. Truman climbed upon an iron bench on the south lawn near his office to make them a little speech.

With a pleased look on his face, the President reminded them of a 1948 incident when he told campaign crowds of seeing a picture of Thomas E. Dewey and Earl Warren, the GOP nominee, posted before a farm gate that was "upside down".

"But that was all right—it didn't make any difference—didn't cost anybody anything. Made me some votes—which was all right."

In more serious vein, he said this country is "no more worried about getting enough to eat."

"The only difficulty we have now is with the distribution system," he continued. "If we can get that distribution system organized on the same basis as the farm production system and the industrial production system, then most of our domestic problems will be solved."

The President said the country wants to keep increasing its wealth and keep it on the basis "so that everybody can have a fair share, and at a price that we can afford to pay."

Senate Votes for Rent Curbs

area, such as New York, that has its own rent control law in effect, or any area like nearby Virginia that has been decontrolled by action of the State Legislature.

Thus even if, as is indicated, the District of Columbia is kept under control, rents in nearby suburban Virginia can skyrocket.

The present law, due to expire June 30, affects about eight million housing units, mostly in large cities. Of prime political importance are Chicago and cities in Pennsylvania.

In Illinois Senate Majority Leader Scott Lucas and in Pennsylvania Senate Majority Whip Francis Myers are facing tough political opposition. They are understood to have put it up to Southern Democrats that without passage of rent control they stood every chance of losing their seats, and the Democrats might lose control of the Congress, and thus the Southern Democrats might lose their important committee chairmanships.

Before the final vote, Democratic Senator Walter F. George of Georgia bitterly assailed backers of the bill, most of them fellow Democrats.

He told the Senate it could not be gainsaid that the "driving force" behind the bill was "purely political," and charged in effect that the Democrats were deserting sound principles for the votes of "pressure groups."

Before voting on final passage, the Senate defeated, 44 to 25, a motion by Senate Minority Leader Kenneth S. Wherry (R., Neb.), to send the measure back to the Banking Committee.

Earlier Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.), who had conducted a 12-hour filibuster against the measure, had threatened to start up again to block a vote on final passage.

In aparent readiness for the new try, he had piled his desk with documents and books, but after the initial test vote he gave up plans for any further lengthy speech.

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), GOP policy chairman, voted for recommittal and against final passage. He said: "I don't know why Congress should act as a wet nurse for States and cities which won't act for themselves."

The present law, and the new bill, allows States to take over rent controls by passing their own laws or to free themselves of controls entirely. Local communities can also relinquish controls through local option.

Senator Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.), chairman of the Senate District Committee, introduced an amendment to make the bill applicable to the District of Columbia, but later withdrew it. He will introduce it as a separate measure.

Servel, Inc., Sued by U. S. As Monopoly

Philadelphia, June 12 (AP).—The Government today charged Servel, Inc., of Evansville, Ind., with operating a monopoly in gas refrigerators.

A civil suit was filed in United States District Court here accusing Servel of violating the Sherman and Clayton Antitrust Acts. The Government petitioned the court to "break up the monopoly" it alleges the company has built up in production and distribution of gas refrigerators in the United States.

Attorney General J. Howard M Grath announced in Washington that Servel "has a complete monopoly in the United States" in the gas refrigeration field and that it h maintained high prices for gas refrigeration equipment.

The Government requested that exclusive distributor contracts be voided and Servel be enjoined from entering into similar arrangements in the future.

Rent Curb Extension Delayed

of the Senate Finance Committee.

He spoke for District and against Federal rent control, and wound up as the target of a sharp scolding by Neely. George said Neely had misunderstood him.

After his tangle with George, Neely accepted a suggestion from Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.) to withdraw his District rent control amendment from the national bill, and leave it for separate legislation.

This move shifted to the House District Committee the spotlight on the question of what will be done about extending District rent controls.

The House group has been called by Chairman John L. McMillan (D., S. C.) to meet Wednesday on the District government's request for another year of rent control—with some modifications—to carry it from June 30, 1950, through June 30, 1951.

The District law, like the national rent law, expires the end of this month.

Neely said he hopes to talk with McMillan about the House activity on District rent control before making any further move in the Senate. If the House passes a District bill, Neely said it would be considered by the Senate District committee without further public hearings.

Senator Neely's rent control extension for the District was modeled on the Senate bill for the rest of the country. It called for keeping controls through the end of this year, with provision for six additional months if that were found necessary by the District Commissioners.

Senator George told the Senate the Neely plan put some members in an awkward position.

For example, said George, he would vote for extension of the District Rent Act for a reasonable period because Congress is the legislative body having jurisdiction here. For the rest of the country, George said, he feels the control of rents is no longer a Federal function. He said the motive for the national bill was purely political, and the result of political pressure groups.

Crime Probe to Get Gamblers' Tax Data

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

Senate crime probers are about to get a look at what well may be their single most important source of information—the Bureau of Internal Revenue's files on gamblers and racketeers.

These files are reported to be much more important than the income-tax returns themselves, for they contain all the reports, hints, tips and other bits of information that come to the Government in the process of checking up on income-tax payments—and the returns of gamblers and racketeers are subjects of constant tooth-combing.

These files will be opened to the Senate committee once President Truman signs the executive order he already has agreed to at the committee's request. It was reported yesterday the order has been approved at the Justice Department and is about ready for the President's signature.

The President also will by appropriate direction let the Senators check over Immigration and Naturalization records and FBI reports.

To Check 'Black Hand' Angle

These latter will enable them to check on a report given them in closed session last week by Harry J. Anslinger, chief of the Narcotics Bureau in the Treasury. This was a statement that the Mafia, or "Black Hand" Society, was the controlling factor in the narcotics business. Anslinger gave the Senators a list of 800 figures in the dope and allied rackets.

Committee sources said Anslinger has long assumed and had good reason to suspect that the Mafia controls the narcotics business. But the Government has never been able to find enough evidence to bring court cases. So the narcotics officials would be happy to have any information the Senators can find that would help them prosecute the gang leaders.

The Mafia originally was a secret society of assassins and murderers that existed in Sicily over 100 years ago. Some of its members presumably came here as immigrants, bringing the gang's methods with them.

About four years ago, it was recalled by the Associatd Press yesterday, two of six men arrested on illegal drug traffic charges in New York were said by narcotics agents to be Mafia members. Col. Garland Williams, a Narcotics Bureau district agent, told the court the society was engaged in Nation-wide dope business "and also is making tremendous sums in gambling and hijacking."

Costello Called Mafia Figure

Williams named Frank Costello, New York gambler, as a dominant figure in the Mafia. But Costello denied it, said he knew nothing about the Mafia, and added that he detested the narcotics racket and anyone connected with it.

Another prominent figure connected with the Mafia in many a story is Luck Luciano, the deported vice king. Here again the evidence appears to be lacking.

The Senate committee today will hear from William Molasky of St. Louis, part owner of a race news service there, who has asked to appear to deny charges of involvement in illegal gambling.

He contends his ownership of a large block of Western Union stock is strictly a business investment and has no relation to the fact that his race wire firm, connected to the Nation-wide Continental Press Service, uses Western Union leased wires. He is expected to bring his records along to the closed hearing, expected to be conducted by committee counsel Rudolph Halley in the committee's offices in the Home Loan Bank Board building at 1st st. and Indiana ave. nw.

House Argues Subpena Right Of Buchanan in Lobby Probe

By The Associated Press

Majority Leader McCormack (D., Mass.) yesterday defended the authority of a House committee chairman to issue subpenas on his own in the current investigation of lobbying.

McCormack spoke out on the House floor after Representative (R., Ind.) challenged the legality of action taken by Chairman Buchanan (D., Pa.) to issue subpenas without the consent of other members of the House lobby inquiry committee.

Representative Brown (R., Ohio) said he agreed with Halleck. Both are members of Buchanan's committee.

But McCormack said the House "always gives the power of subpena to the chairman directly." He said otherwise a majority of the committee could upset the chairman's power and "thwart the intent of the House in setting up a special committee."

The dispute arose from Buchanan's action in summoning officials of three organizations—the Committee for Constitutional Government, National Economic Council, and Constitutional Educational League to produce records of their activities.

Buchanan said he would call a closed session of the committee to thresh out the clash of views.

Meanwhile, the House Rules Committee faced action on a resolution by Representative Hoffman (R., Mich.) to suspend the activities of the Buchanan committee and set up a special committee to investigate the Buchanan inquiry.

Hoffman's resolution may be considered later this week. The Michigan legislator protested Buchanan's move in sending out letters to 166 business corporations calling for itemized accounts of their expenditures since January 1, 1947, for any trips to Washington "designed to influence policy or public opinion on national issues."

Buchanan later narrowed the scope of the information he sought, eliminating data on trips dealing with sales activities and other non-legislative matters.

Wage Boost Awarded To Oak Ridge Strikers

Oak Ridge, Tenn., June 12 (U.P.).—Construction laborers who spearheaded a walkout at two atomic projects here last month have been granted a 13-cent hourly wage increase by an arbitration board, a union business agent said.

Local 818 of the AFL General Laborers Union began a 700-man walkout May 24. It mushroomed into wildcat strike of 4500 AFL craftsmen. Virtually all new construction on two uranium separation plants and on town site projects was halted.

The union originally asked increases ranging from 15 to 25 cents under a wage reopening clause in its contract. Business Agent Fred Stratton said the union will feel "pretty satisfied"

Foreign Ministers Of Big 3 May Meet In N. Y. This Fall

The State Department yesterday said the Big Three Western foreign ministers probably will meet in New York in late August or September.

Press Officer Michael McDermott, however, said he knows of no plans for a Big Four foreign ministers' meeting this summer.

He dismissed as "completely speculative" a report by radio commentator and columnist Drew Pearson that the American, British and French foreign ministers would meet with Russia this summer in another attempt to end the cold war.

The Big Three meeting will be a follow-up to the discussions by Secretary Acheson and Foreign Minister Bevin of Britain and Schuman of France in May. It was tentatively scheduled after the London meetings ended.

Bookie Syndicate Faces Suit

Miami, Fla., June 12 (AP).—The Miami Daily News today said one of the Nation's leading income-tax consultants has been retained to represent the S. & G. bookie syndicate in a two-million-dollar tax-evasion case.

The newspaper identified him as George K. Bowden, of the firm of Bowden, Taylor & Norville of Chicago, a leading authority on tax matters.

The S. & G. syndicate has operated at Miami Beach for more than 20 years, controlling bookie operations in scores of places along the plush waterfront. The initials do not stand for any words and nobody seems to know how they originated.

The newspaper said the case against the S. & G. syndicate was a criminal case and not a civil proceeding. Papers already have been filed in Washington, it was reported.

The disputed two million dollars involves so-called "charity" payments made over a long period of time, the paper said, together with charges the syndicate failed to declare some of its income.

One of the issues in the case is whether these "charity" payments are deductible, the paper said.

Hogan to Prosecute Erickson Personally

New York, June 12 (NYHT).—District Attorney Frank S. Hogan will personally prosecute Frank Erickson on bookmaking charges if Erickson sticks to his not guilty plea, it was learned today.

A date for trial was supposed to have been set today, but it was postponed until Wednesday.

Hogan, it is known, does not want to wait until the fall to try Erickson, who, according to persistent reports, intends to change his plea to guilty. However, it is said, he is in no hurry to do so, first taking advnatage of all legal avenues open to him.

Tacks on Road Cause Pickets To Be Moved

Morristown, Tenn., June 12 (U.P.).—CIO pickets defied orders by State troopers today to drop their signs and pick up brooms to sweep away tacks thrown on the highway in front of the American Enka Corp. textile mill.

The CIO textile workers, who have been blamed for outbreaks of violence against nonstrikers in the 11-week strike at the rayon mill, were ordered to stay on the opposite side of the road from the mill gate.

State Safety Commissioner Sam Neal said he would bar picketing and keep the strikers off the road until assured that "no more tacks will be strewn on the highway."

Plant guards swept the tacks from the highway.

Homes of two Enka nonstrikers were dynamited over a weekend marked also by stonings and beatings.

The State director of the union, H. S. Williams, called on the 200 strikers at the meeting to stand in a vote against violence. Every person in the hall stood.

The company begged Gov. Gordon Browning at Nashville to send back the National Guardsmen who left Morristown last Friday shortly before the weekend violence began.

Do You Want Your Salary Cut??

Did you know that your salary can be cut where you spend your money? It can, just as drastically as if they cut it where you earn it!

If the prices of things you buy are increased, then your salary is cut. If you buy wisely, shop for bargains, your pay is raised.

And since you must spend more than you can save, this kind of pay cut (or pay raise) is more important than actual income.

At this moment, the District Committee of the Congress is considering regulations to virtually ban cut-rate selling of standard brand liquors in Washington. This affects you, whether or not you buy liquors!

Why? Because, if what you pay for one thing can be standardized, so can everything else.

It's wrong for two other people to decide how much you must spend for your wants. Yet it's proposed that distributors and retailers contract on minimum retail prices. And you are the one who must pay them!

This has been called "Fair Trade." It is the law in some places—and in every case the public's pay has been cut, by higher prices!

So, it has been proposed that your salary be cut.

We like the present system. YOU are sole boss—and you're a tough one.

If you like a store's prices you buy. If you don't like 'em you stay away by the hundreds. That's the way it should be.

Help keep it that way. Register the strongest possible protest against a cut in your salary in any form.

Saigh Cancels Game, Bows To Frick, Not Chandler

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

EARLY LAST year there was doubt that Ben Hogan would live to see another National Open, much less win one, so his victory at Merion was something very special. So magnificent, in fact, that even Hogan's pleas to "forget about my accident and that come-back stuff," are difficult to respect.

Little Ben was understandably weary of being an object of sympathy in every tournament he has played since his near-fatal auto crash. But just as understandable was the eagerness of the peepul to root hard for the guy who had fought his way back like Hogan.

POVICH

For Hogan, it was a new experience, being the sentimental favorite in an open. Even those who had admired his golf in his healthy years always viewed him with some reserve otherwise. He was too grim, too much the mechanical man, too impersonal about the whole business of playing the game to qualify as a whopping gallery favorite.

But with his once-spry gait on the golf course reduced to a slow shuffle and his face still showing the ordeal of his months in the hospital, Hogan won 'em. They saw him smile through his misfortune, and that helped.

A WEEK BEFORE, when he was playing in the National Celebrities Tournament at the Army-Navy Country Club, Hogan said, "Please don't make a fuss over me on the first tee." He was to get a special citation from Attorney General J. Howard McGrath and a scroll acclaiming "your comeback that has been a model of inspiration to American youth."

It was in the Celebrities that Hogan broke down his own reserve perhaps for the first time in his life. His friends declared it was the first time they'd ever seen him smile on the first tee of any tournament. He found himself even manning the loud-speaker during the antics of Danny Kaye and Milton Berle and Bob Hope and Godfrey, and having fun.

"Hogan didn't know that things like this could ever happen on a golf course," said one of his friends. "It is loosening him up, and I hope he keeps the mood next week at the Open."

And in fact, Hogan was the least tense of any of the three men in the play-off. He was gallery-conscious, and they liked it. For the first time in his career, he was probably trying to win for the gallery as well as for Hogan.

THE NEW popularity that has come to Hogan late in his career, savors of the same experience as Jack Dempsey's. Not until he got the tough break in his battle of the long count with Gene Tunney at Chicago, did Dempsey achieve his peak following. Not until adversity hit him, did Dempsey come in for the full hero worship.

Lloyd Mangrum's two-stroke penalty for picking up and cleaning off his ball on the sixteenth hole of the play-off, and his frank admission later that "I didn't know the rules," also recalls a Dempsey experience. In his biggest fight, Dempsey, too, was a victim of ignorance of the rules.

That was when Dempsey put Tunney on the floor in the seventh round, and failed to retire to a neutral corner as the rules provided. Dave Barry interrupted his count over Tunney at five, to lead Dempsey back out of range, and then resumed it at "one", giving Tunney actually 14 seconds to recover from his knockdown.

Yet Mangrum's lapse couldn't tarnish Hogan's triumph. He still had shot his 69 and had four strokes to spare in all.

HOGAN HAS just about punctured all doubt that he's the world's best golfer. There used to be dissenters, who cited Sammy Snead and Byron Nelson, but Nelson has retired from the game and Snead bóasts none of the consistency of little Ben.

Snead's chances at Merion were not too good, anyway. Unhappily for him, the out-size greens were a threat to his greatest weakness—putting. Otherwise he can match Hogan shot for shot, outdrive him a bit and lay those long irons a bit closer, perhaps. But as long as putting remains an important factor in golf, Snead can never be said to have the well-rounded game that Hogan takes onto a golf course.

For Hogan, the great satisfaction is that he doesn't have to win another golf tournament to solidify his place in the game. He won the Open in a year when his back ached, his knees wanted to buckle and he was yearning for the sprightliness of his youth. He was wunn'erful.

Bartos Resigns From Marines To Join Up With Redskins

First Lieut. Joe Bartos of the Marine Corps, is expected to become second-string halfback Joe Bartos of the Washington Redskins shortly.

Bartos, crack fullback for the Naval Academy for three years, has a date to talk contract with the Redskins Thursday morning. His resignation has already been accepted by the Marines, effective July 3, at which time he'll probably join the Redskins officially.

The 210-pound Ohioan played regular fullback for the Middies from 1944 to 1946. Graduated in 1947, he played for the all-service championship Quantico Marines for the next two years and with Camp Pendleton last year.

The Redskins drafted him two years ago, hopeful they could use him at that time. Bartos, who's only 23 and stands 6 feet 4 inches high, brought a track team from Camp Pendleton to Quantico yesterday for the All-Marine Corps track meet Friday and Saturday.

Meanwhile, the Redskins announced receipt of the signed contract of Fullback Harry Dowda, former Wake Forest star who played his first year of pro ball last season.

Sunday Night Ball Out, Says League Head

St. Louis, June 12 (AP).—The controversial Sunday night baseball game scheduled for July 16 between the St. Louis Cardinals and the Brooklyn Dodgers was called off today by President Fred M. Saigh of the Cardinals.

Saigh said his action was based "entirely" on a ruling by National League President Ford Frick and Louis Carroll, league counsel, that the game would be in violation of league regulations.

"There were no other considerations," Saigh said in a statement.

Commissioner A. B. Chandler had ordered Saigh last Friday to cancel preparations for the game on the grounds that it would conflict with church services. This, the commissioner maintained, would not be in the best interest of baseball.

Saigh Disagrees

Saigh promptly disagreed with the commissioner's contention and asked for a hearing on the matter. Meanwhile, he said, preparations for the game would go on.

Today Saigh received Carroll's interpretation of the league rule on the subject. The rule reads: "no night game shall be scheduled on a 'getaway' date without the consent of the visiting team, or on Sunday."

Saigh interpreted this to mean that a Sunday night game could be scheduled with the consent of the visiting team and said consent for the game in question had been obtained from Branch Rickey, president of the Dodgers.

But Frick and Carroll maintained the rule prohibited all Sunday night games. Saigh said he would ask that the rule be clarified at the next league meeting.

Saigh said the game, originally scheduled for the afternoon of June 3 and prevented by rain, had again been rescheduled for the afternoon of Monday, July 17. A night game will be played the same date. Separate admissions will be charged for the two contests.

Baptists Object

Saigh's plans for the Sunday night game, an innovation in the major leagues, were opposed by some St. Louis Baptist ministers who hold church services on Sunday nights. However, another minister said people might do a lot worse things than attend baseball games on Sunday evenings."

Mack Won't Sell Club

Philadelphia, June 12 (AP).—The Philadelphia Athletics announced today that the American League Baseball Club definitely will not be sold this season.

Management of the Athletics announced its stand in a statement:

"As we have stated before, we will listen to any bonafide offers when they are presented. But even if we should receive an attractive offer, one worthy of consideration, it would take months to straighten out the details in connection with such a transaction."

A spokesman for the club said no definite offer had been received from any group, including a syndicate headed by James P. Clark, trucking executive and president of the Philadelphia Eagles of the National Football League.

Mack Named All-Star Honorary Manager

Chicago, June 12 (AP).—Connie Mack, observing his golden anniversary in major league baseball, will be an "honorary manager" and toss out the first ball at the All-Star game in Comiskey Park, July 11.

Pirates After Joe Gordon

Pittsburgh, June 12 (AP).—The floundering Pittsburgh Pirates are dickering with the Cleveland Indians to buy their ageing second baseman Joe Gordon.

H. Roy Haney, Pittsburgh's general manager, conceded this today. However, he said that up to now Cleveland did not want to let Gordon go. Cleveland's Lou Boudreau had "no comment" on the deal. Gordon has had a punchless season with the Indians. He is batting only .229 and has hit five homers.

Woodmont Plans 'All-Out' Welcome Tonight for Fazio

Members of Woodmont Golf and Country Club will hold a big "Welcome Home" banquet for George Fazio tonight as the local pro returns from Piping Rock, N. Y., where he played yesterday after finishing third in the golf's biggest tournament, the National Open.

"We're just as proud of George for finishing third as we would have been if he'd won," Club President Arthur Sundlun said.

"The membership has purchased a gift suitable for George's great achievement, but we're not going to tell what it is—we want to surprise him when he gets home," he said.

Meanwhile, in New York, Fazio announced that he has accepted an invitation to play in the Goodall Round Robin Golf tournament starting Thursday.

The two other members of the Open's Big Three, Ben Hogan, winner of the playoff, and Lloyd Mangrum, the runnerup, have already accepted invitations, so Fazio will get another crack at beating the two of them.

The tournament is a round robin affair in which every player will compete against every other player

Rosecroft Double Pays All of $5.20

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Track President William E. Miller's 10-year-old Henry Volo won both ends of the feature named in his honor last night at Rosecroft Raceway.

Driven by Earl Avery, Henry Volo took both ends of the Henry Volo in a four-horse field, paying $3.40 and $3, respectively.

But speed and driving honors went to Del Miller, no relation, who scored in both ends of the Sheppard Special (and daily double) for Tobacco Tycoon William N. Reynolds.

With Solicitor and Tar Heel, 2-year-old pacers, Del Miller raced up his third daily double in 17 racing nights. They paid a microscopic $5.20 and old hands were trying to figure when there was a smaller daily double in Maryland, either with harness or flat horses.

Solicitor, $3.40 shot, turned his mile in a sparkling 2:07 4/5, fastest time turned in this season by a 2 year old anywhere in the country. Tar Heel, who paid $3.40 straight, was only a second slower.

The crowd of 7620 wagered $289,589 helping to surpass last year's total handle of $4,081,128 with three nights of racing left. Right now, the total has reached $4,370,717.

Segura Wins Pro Title as Injury Stops Kovacs

Cleveland, Ohio, June 12 (U.P.).—Bouncy Pancho Segura of Ecuador tonight won the 23rd National professional tennis championship after big Frank Kovacs of Oakland, Calif., was forced to withdraw in the fourth set because of a trick knee.

The little South American was leading Kovacs in the best out of five singles finale, 6-4, 1-6, 8-6

The game Californian, who was plagued with injuries all week, collapsed three times on the court before officials ruled Segura the victor by default.

Wherein Par Is No Good

By Dave Heller
Post Reporter

THE PAR 5 eighth hole at Army Navy holds no terrors for one foursome. Assistant Pro Tom Rainey reports that Commander R. M. Tunnel recently holed out a 25-foot putt after reaching the green in two, to rack up an eagle.

His playing partners, Commanders K. C. Childers, W. B. Hearn, and D. G. Hardy, all came up with birdies. First time he ever heard of that happening on the score-breaking eighth, Tom says.

FRANK CHRISTOPHER, Prince Georges golfer, is a nephew of baseball's immortal Wilbert Robinson, manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers during one of their great eras, including the pennant-winning team of 1920. Frank shoots in the middle 80s.

FORT DUPONT Public Golf Course has two events scheduled for this week. The men's club will meet at 8:15 Thursday for a showing of the movie, "Famous Fairways," and the women's club is sponsoring a mixed Scotch foursome Sunday.

Chevy Chase's Ralph Bogart is defending champ in the Maryland State Golf Tournament which opens Thursday at Baltimore . . . Rock Creek Public Golf Course has a nine-hole mixed Scotch foursome every Sunday that's open to any public links golfers who want to play. . . . East Potomac has the J. R. Tomlin Memorial Trophy now under way which is open to any golfers interested. Entrants have unti the 18th to shoot a qualifying score at any time convenient to them. It's no-handicap affair . . .

Maybe Hittle, Genovese Would Have Been Better Off if Nats Hadn't Discovered Them

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

LLOYD HITTLE and George Genovese have learned that failure to stick with the Nats means demotion to a leaque lower than that which they played in when acquired by Washington. Both came to the Nats from the Triple A Pacific Coast League, but when the Nats decided to ship them they were shunted to the Chattanooga club of the Double A Southern Association . . . With the departure of Hittle, the Nats have now completed the breakup of the most rhythmical battery in baseball. Remember the sing-song Hittle, Gettel and Weigel line of disastrous '49? . . . Insiders report that Lew Worsham's job as pro at Oakmont, one of the best jobs in the country, isn't too secure . . . If Joe Haynes gets by the June 15 trading deadline, he'll become the first Washington player in four years to stick with the team after guarding President Truman's box on opening day . . . Joe Kuhel, who had his troubles managing the Nats last year, is finding his job at Kansas City no bed of roses either. His Blues, the Yankees' No. 1 farm team, are in fifth place . . .

REGARDLESS of the Southeastern Conference's action on television, Georgia Tech is expected to continue televising its home games. Tech has a unique video arrangement whereby the sponsors pay the school for each empty seat at its major games for the right to televise . . . "Most of our big games are always a sell-out and we want as many people as possible to see us play," explained Athletic Director Bobby Dodd . . . Good news for Maryland U. football fans: Coach Jim Tatum thinks Jack Scarbath, his sophomore quarterback, "is as good at this stage of the game as Bobby Williams, of Notre Dame, was when he was a sophomore" . . . G. Leo B. Carroll, the Old Liners' sports publicity man, is in somewhat of a quandry. Already he's worrying about whether to concentrate his buildup for All-America on Tackle Ray Krouse or Guard Bobby Ward. "It's really a problem when you have two All-Americas on your hand," moans Carroll, who recently became a father.

LEO A. COVALESKI, of 3339 18th st. nw., suffered an upset at The Washington Post's National Celebrities Golf Tournament: He wasn't hit by a golf ball . . . In the 1949 frolic at Army Navy, Covaleski stopped a tee shot by Del Webb, coowner of the Yankees, with his leg and only two weeks ago he suffered a sprained ankle when he was hit by a golf ball at Rock Creek Park. . . . "But I enjoyed the Celebrities just the same," he wrote. . . . Another Celebrities Note: The tournament's fame has spread as far as St. Andrews, Scotland, from where Jacket Reid sends a snapshot of Bing Crosby, "who played in your Celebrities golf," wearing a Scots tammy with a "toorie" on top . . . pros entering the All-American Golf Tournament at Chicago pay an entry fee of $15.00 to compete for $50,000 in prize money, but it costs amateurs $20.00 to try for only $1000 in merchandise prizes . . . Tackle John (Tree) Adams, traded to the Chicago Bears by the Redskins, is reluctant to leave Washington where he's worked up a good home building business . . . Zeke Bonura, the former Nats first baseman, is looking for a job as player-manager of a minor league team . . .

Nats Give Up on Hittle, He Goes to Farm for Rookie

Griffs Get Ross From Chattanooga

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

En route to St. Louis, June 12.—The Lloyd Hittle story, or Clark Griffith's misadventure with $65,000, today entered its saddest chapter as the Nats struck out for an 18-game road trip, starting at St. Louis.

Hittle isn't aboard the club's train. He's on another choo-choo, heading for Chattanooga, and its back to the minors for the little left-hander. Griffith and Manager Bucky Harris are giving up, at least temporarily, on the once highly prized southpaw.

Ironically, it was the White Sox, the only team he could beat consistently, who wrote finis to Hittle's major league career at this point. When they knocked him out of the box on Sunday, Harris felt impelled to consign Hittle to the Chattanooga farm team.

Hittle's chief charm with the Nats was his ability to beat Chicago. Of his seven major league wins in two seasons, five were over the White Sox, otherwise, he won only 2 games, lost 11.

Last June, Griffith bought Hittle from Oakland of the Pacific Coast League for cash and Pitchers Milo Candini and Forrest Thompson in a transaction that added up to $65,000. He never justified that price. Harris believes that with more seasoning in the minors, he might.

Chattanooga Flash

At the same time, the Nats announced the acquisition of 21-year-old Bobby Ross from Chattanooga. With six wins and only three defeats for the sixth-place Lookouts, Lefthander Ross has been their top pitcher. He'll join the club in St. Louis. "He can fire that ball," says Irv Noren, who played with Ross in California. Formerly with St. Paul, Ross drifted to the Pueblo, Colo., club, whence he was drafted last winter by Chattanooga.

Ross has won five and lost three for the Lookouts this season. Ross had a 7-6 record with Pueblo of the Western Association. In past seasons he has been bothered with lack of control. This year, however, he has walked only 44 men in 92 2/3 innings, while striking out 62 and permitting 82 hits.

And at this time, Bucky Harris was concerned with his pitching department. His Nats open up with a twi-night double-header in St. Louis, and after four games in three days with the Browns, they move to Chicago for the same kind of schedule.

Only Two Starters

Harris can count only on Sid Hudson and Bob Kuzava as solid starters. Otherwise he must choose from Steve Nagy, Dick Welk and Joe Haynes, all of whom have been getting their bumps. He indicates that he will get an early look at Rookie Ross in a starting role.

Harris isn't happy, either about his first base situation. He concedes Irv Noren an emphatic "A" for effort but recognizes he's no first baseman. He wants Noren back in the outfield where he belongs.

IN SHORT.—Due also to join the Nats in St. Louis tomorrow is Fred Taylor, rookie first baseman from Ohio State U. . . . Harris plans call for tall boy Taylor to be shipped to Chattanooga, but he's hoping, too, for that miracle which might find Taylor breaking in immediately with the Nats, and sticking. . . Many a Nat paid a call on Gil Coan in Georgetown Hospital before entraining for the West, today.

Nats' Havana Club Too Good, Foes Wailing

Miami, Fla., June 12 (AP).—Havana's champion Cubans expressed their collective ire today at reports that other Florida international league teams may vote to drop the Washington farm team from the Class B circuit at the end of the current season.

The Cubans have dominated the league ever since it was organized in 1946 and word is that other clubs want to get rid of them for that reason. Havana currently is leading by 4½ lengths.

The Miami Herald's Barney Waters interviewed several Havana players on the subject today and here is what they said:

Bob Estalella, former major leaguer:

"If they (the unidentified weeping club owners) can't win with the ball players they have, let them get more and better ones. Baseball is too big a game for something like this to happen."

Frank Gallardo, secnd baseman:

"During our series in Fort Lauderdale (last week) they had to add bleachers to centerfield to accommodate the crowd. How many clubs have they had to do that for?"

Justo Aspiazu, first baseman:

"It's poor sportsmanship, that's all it is. I'd like to know how those guys (the clubowners) would act if they were in our place.

Roberto Tapanez, an outfielder:

"We help the league. Didn't they try to form leagues in Florida before we came in?" (He referred to leagues which had collapsed before the F-I was organized.)

Only recently Pitcher Sandalio Consuegra joined the Washington Senators. Conrado Marrero, now a Washington regular, pitched for Havana the past three seasons.

Favorite Players Only Ones Hurt in Delaware Steeplechase

Bill Bennings

Dear Folks:

The stewards here have disqualified two horses in the last few racing days without a foul being claimed. In each case, they have delayed the program to view the movies of the race in question. On both occasions, they disqualified a horse that did not appear to be at fault. For instance, Alexis seemed to come over in the stretch and bump Navy Ace into Triple Hearts in the second race. However, it was Navy Ace's number that came down. Apprentice Joe Culmone was aboard Alexis which led a press box wise cracker to say, "This Culmone isn't photogenic." The $25,000 added Sussex Handicap here Saturday is shaping up as a real race with Loser Weeper, Cochise and others slated to go postward. Little Harp ended his long stay with Trainer Jimmy McGee on the Monday card. He was claimed by Willie Jones for $12,000. Cumberland opens with a Tuesday program.—BILL

Phiblant Wins Feature As Hot Cools

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Delaware Park, June 12.—The best that can be said of the $10,000 added Tom Roby Steeplechase, first jumping event of the year in this section, is that nobody was hurt, physically that is, because the favorite players finished with compound fractures of the pocketbook.

The field, scratched down to seven, contained a lot of timber cattle none of which had won in two years the amount of cash offered to the winner—or $9250.

Phiblant, owned by John M. Schiff of New York, turned up as the winner in the role of an $8.50 second choice. The 6-year-old, handled by Harry Harris and carrying top weight of 159 pounds, came to the finish line four lengths in front of Oak Spring Stable's Sergt. Peace, which in turn had a four and one-half length advantage over C. Mahlon Kline's Tolbiac, half

The big disappointment of the 15 jump affair named for Tom Roby, a steelechase rider injured here in 1942, was Rigan McKinney's Hot. A heavily-played favorite, Hot cooled off considerably during the running and was no where in particular at the end.

Phiblant made it two wins in three starts this year and was clocked in 3:50 4-5 for the 2 miles over the all-infield course.

Jockey Charls Wahler was suspended for 10 racing days for allowing his mount, My Celeste, to go out through the stretch, interfering with Swap Out and Blue Zac on last Saturday's program, the stewards announced today.

Honored at Banquet

Graduation Will Weaken W-L's National Crew Champs

By Happy Walker

BIGWIGS OF THE sporting world, leading educators and proud parents of Arlington turned out the other night to pay homage to the athletes of Washington and Lee at the annual varsity night banquet held at the school. The occasion honored the school's outstanding athletes of the season, including the now renowned national high school rowing champions for the second consecutive year. Accolades were heaped on both varsity and junior varsity crews as well as coach Charlie Butt, whose coaching wizardry is responsible for the success of the crew.

Walker

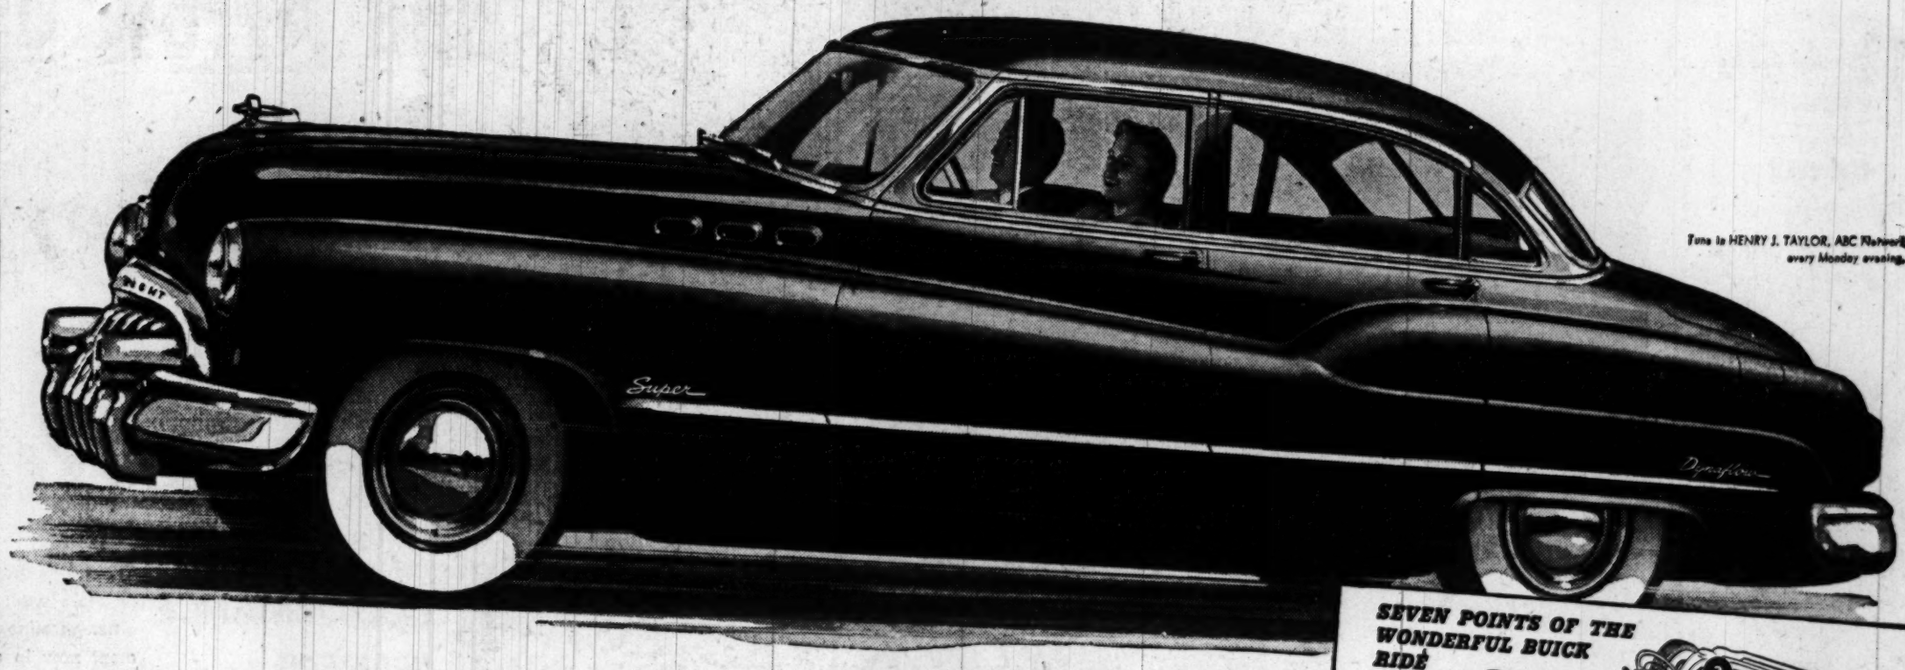
Coach Butt, in praising the prowess of his wards, was reluctant to admit what his crew will do next season. Both varsity and junior varsity crews will lose a number of veterans through graduation, including Dick McCombs, star coxswain; Pete Sparhawk, Kado Beacham, Buddy Virts, Ted Ascherfeld, Solon Slater, and Paul Yeager, captain. Athletes and guests were treated to brief remarks by Capt. Sherman Clarke, United States Navy, who in 1920 was coxswain of the Middies Olympic crew, and Ossie Bluege, famed member of the Senators of yesteryear, now head of Washington's farm system.

AREA SAILING took several turns over the weekend—highlighted by the windup of the Potomac River Sailing Association's spring sail series. Also of importance was the Comet class eliminations concluded with Sunday's first race to name the eligibles for the Chesapeake Bay territorial championships. Comet Class Chairman Karl Gerhard announced the following high point winners who will represent the Potomac River fleet at Oxford on July 22 and 23: Harvey Lekson (Slipenir), Bob Ray (Lucky Strike), Karl Gerhard (Enchantress), Buzz Manders (Pop's Headache), Bill Straub (Willie Wink), John Roseborough (Snaful Maru) and Russ Parker (Dorris).

POTOMAC RIVER Power Squadron skippers are sure to rid themselves of the not-too-much-wanted sourpuss trophy come the Fifth District meeting in July at Baltimore, that is, if Sunday's navigation tryouts mean anything.

The outing, mainly a good time gathering of the skippers and their families was given over to some serious navigation practice under the direction of Lieut. Comdr. Alex Gregory who put the skippers through their paces off Bill Pugh's summer home on Rhode River.

How SMOOTH can a ride be?



Tune in HENRY J. TAYLOR, ABC Network, every Monday evening.

THAT'S a question well worth answering before you settle on your next automobile.

For what fun is there—what thrill—in a car that is prisoner to the city streets, slowed down by roads a Buick is built to take in stride?

So we'd like to show you just how much smoothness your money can buy. How levelly you float over cobbles and car tracks—over rutty gravel and wavy black-top—in this stunning traveler.

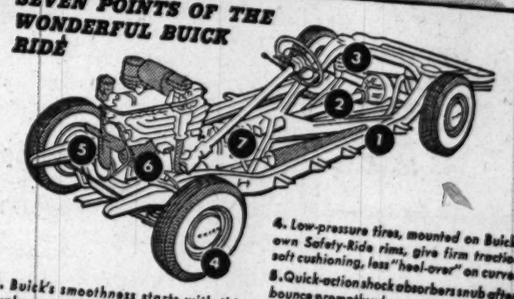
The car will be any Buick you prefer—SPECIAL, SUPER or ROADMASTER. You can name the place—pick a spot or a stretch you know so that you can measure Buick's smoothness against your own experience—and we'll promise you a new sensation in riding comfort.

The time can be any time you want to arrange with your Buick dealer—who is ready to show with actual figures that "if you can afford a new car you can afford a Buick."

See him, will you, and treat yourself to some real comfort?

ONLY BUICK HAS Dynaflow—and with it goes: HIGHER-COMPRESSION Fireball valve-in-head power in three engines. (New F-263 engine in SUPER models.) • NEW-PATTERN STYLING, with MULTI-GUARD forefront, taper-through fenders, "double bubble" taillights • WIDE-ANGLE VISIBILITY, close-up road view both forward and back • TRAFFIC-HANDY SIZE, less over-all length for easier parking and garaging, short turning radius • EXTRA-WIDE SEATS cradled between the axles • SOFT BUICK RIDE, from all-coil springing, Safety-Ride rims, low-pressure tires, ride-steadying torque-tube WIDE ARRAY OF MODELS with Body by Fisher.

SEVEN POINTS OF THE WONDERFUL BUICK RIDE



1. Buick's smoothness starts with this husky weveproof frame.
2. A stout torque-tube serves like the keel of a battleship to steady the whole car.
3. Gentle coil springs, the softest type men know, let each wheel "step over" bumps individually, just as only the front wheels do on most other cars.
4. Low-pressure tires, mounted on Buick's own Safety-Ride rims, give firm traction, soft cushioning, less "heel-over" on curves.

Fishing No Lottery, Anglers Tell P. O.

By The Associated Press

Fishing is skill, not luck, Congress was told yesterday, as anglers angrily struck out at a Postoffice Department ruling that said big fish are caught by chance.

"This business of fishing is of the utmost skill," said Representative J. Caleb Boggs (R.,Del.).

"Skill," agreed Representative Charles Bennett (D., Fla.), and added:

"Almost any sport has some chance in it. If a man hits a golf ball, the wind may cause it to change direction."

And Capt. Randolph Harrison, who has been taking fishing parties on the Chesapeake Bay for 25 years, handed down the expert's decision:

"Someone has said skill is the factor nine times out of ten. I'd say it is nearer 9999 times out of 10,000."

The question—"Is fishing skill or luck?"—bobbed up in Congress because of a Postoffice ruling in February. The Department, in ruling on whether news or advertising about fishing contests could go through the mails, made this decision:

If there was a prize for the biggest fish caught, and if the contestant had put up money to enter the contest, it was a lottery, and hence barred from the mails.

The department admitted some skill may be involved in getting the proper tackle. But whether the catch is a minnow or a whopper—that's luck, the department said.

"It's another one of those things we have too much of already," Representative Edward Miller (R., Md.) said. "It's legislation by bureaus or department instead of by Congress."

After the department's decision, several bills were introduced to take fishing contests from under the lottery laws. Hearings were held on these yesterday by a House Judiciary Subcommittee.

Unhappily for Postmaster General Donaldson, the acting chairman, Representative Ramsey (D., W. Va.), is a fisherman. So when Representative Nelson (R., Me.) said he simply couldn't go along with the Postmaster General that luck is the big factor, Ramsey chimed in with:

"He hasn't done much fishing."

"I don't think so," Nelson agreed.

"He's been playing poker," Ramsey said.

And a little later Ramsey broke in with this comment:

"I can't imagne Jim Farley interfering with a thing like this."

Representatives Tolefson and Mack, Washington, Republicans, said that as far as they can find out fishing contests are non-profit affairs, run to advertise an area and attract tourists.

Max Chambers, Preston, Md., publisher who is president of the Chesapeake Bay Fishing Fair Association, agreed. He said a contestant can enter the fishing fair for $2 but the costs average $2.14.

Although there was considerable grumbling about the Post Office Department's decision, it's nice to report the hearing recessed on this happy note:

Captain Harrison organized a fishing party.

Good skill, gentlemen!

It also approved the reappointment of J. Alston Adams of New Jersey to the Home Loan Bank board for a term expiring June 30, 1954.

Law Panel Seeks to Curb Divorce Evils

Baltimore, June 12 (AP).—A committee of judges and lawyers suggested today that something be done to keep divorced persons from remarrying "before the ink is dry on the decree."

The committee, appointed by the Maryland State Bar Association especially to look for weak spots in Maryland's divorce laws, also proposed that Governor Lane appoint a group to study the whole field of domestic relations.

This group, it said, should represent social and religious organizations as well as the legal profession.

The suggestions were made by the Bar Association under Judge Herman M. Moser of the Supreme Bench of Baltimore. It also included Judge Joseph D. Mish, of the Fourth Judicial Circuit; John Clarence North, of Easton, and Gerald W. Hill and J. Nicholas Shriver, both of Baltimore.

Although its report proposed no changes in the present grounds for absolute divorce, partial divorce or annulment, the committee suggested several minor changes in the existing law.

One would require a 30-day waiting period between divorce and subsequent marriage. It is now possible for a divorce to be appealed and set aside during that time.

The waiting period would eliminate the possibility of an early remarriage being declared illegal

Male Bear Will Be Confined Alone for Life After Giving Mate Fatal Beating at D. C. Zoo

The Washington Post

BEHIND THE BARS—Male bear, blamed in mate's death, paces his cage in "solitary" confinement

A brown Alaska Kodiak bear died last week at the Zoo of a fatal cuffing from her mate.

Headkeeper of the Zoo, Frank Low, said the two, which have shared a cage for the past two years with another female, got into a battle about 2½ weeks ago.

The male bear, who is only 4 years old, landed several hard "licks" about her body, which resulted in her suffering internal injuries, he explained.

The injuries, plus her age—she was 19—led to her death last Friday, Low said.

Bear fanciers, who have watched the two for some time, said the female spent most of her time biting and cuffing the male bear. Zoo officials said, however, that they fought with each other no more than bears usually do.

The male bear was removed from the cage immediately after the battle, and will be kept in a cage alone from now on, according to Low.

The female bear was a gift to the zoo from former Senator Frederick Hale (R., Me.). It was received here June 1, 1931, when it was only four months old.

The male bear was given to the zoo by the Alaska Game Commission and the Fish and Wild Life Service of the Interior Department. It was born about March, 1946.

Pair of Shrews Given to Zoo; Smallest Mammals in World

By Harry Goodwin—The Washington Post

NOT EVEN A HANDFUL—Tiny shrew—smallest mammal in existence—poses in keeper's hand at the Zoo

Two of the smallest mammals in existence—the shrew—went on exhibit at the Zoo yesterday.

Considered a rare animal, these two have the distinction of being unusually so, in that they were raised in captivity.

The two were part of a large litter from parents given to Ernest Walker, assistant director of the Zoo, by the Fish and Wild Life Service, which found them on an island in the Patuxent River.

Experimenting constantly with diet, Walker finally hit on one, which has let the wee animals flourish. It consists mainly of ripe bananas, egg yolk, cottage cheese, meal worms and "in theory enough vitamins to kill them, although, strangely enough, they have survived he explained.

The two shrews which are full-grown and 4 to 5 months old, weigh only about an eighth of an ounce each and measure 2½ inches in length. They have a poisonous bite, and can attack a worm, several times their length, making him limp and lumpy with their short nips. Their poison is similar to that of the cobra, affecting the nervous system.

Shrews have an extremely sensitive nervous system, Walker said. Their respirations and heart beat are fast and their rate of metabolism high.

He has kept those he raised in glass cages, the bottoms of which are covered with soft soil and leaf mold. Walker said he has successfully raised about 40 shrews so far, many of which he has given to laboratories, such as the Public Health Service, for use in experiments.

5 Breakings Are Charged To Youth, 19

Suspect Arrested 13 Minutes After Beating of Hillside Gas Station Operator

A woman's alertness, her husband's bravery and a policeman's memory added up yesterday to the arrest of a Washington youth on five breaking and entering charges.

The suspect, John George Gonzaga, 19, of 726 I st. se., has admitted the five charges, according to Prince Georges County police. Bond was set at $1000 pending further investigation.

The circumstances leading to the arrest began, according to police, at 2:40 a. m. when Mrs. Elmer E. Batterton awakened her husband because she heard "noises" in Batterton's gas station at 5321 Marlboro pike, Hillside, Md. The house is adjacent to the station.

Batterton, taking up a shotgun, went to the station and was attacked by three men, police said. During a scuffle, the shotgun was taken away from him.

Mrs. Batterton, officials said, noticed the tag numbers on the car and called police. Batterton was taken to Casualty Hospital with cuts and bruises of the face.

In his Park Police cruiser, Sergt. Jack Hobbs heard the police broadcast on the car and recalled, he said, that just a week before he had arrested three men on a traffic charge in a car with the same tags. With two Metropolitan officers, he went to Gonzaga's home and made the arrest.

Police said they found radios, cigarettes, tools and electrical appliances matching the description of loot taken in recent Prince Georges burglaries. In Gonzaga's car, they discovered the shotgun.

Prince Georges County police said Gonzaga admitted that shortly before the Batterton burglary he and companions broke into the McCully and Foster service station, 7060 Marlboro pk., District Heights, Md., and stole $25 worth of cigarettes, $30 in tools and about $40 in cash.

Gonzaga also admitted, police said, these burglaries on June 6:

Silver Star Cleaners, 4290 Branch ave., Silver Hills, Md.—cash and dry cleaning; Seitz and Burns appliance store, Oxon Hill, Md.—electrical appliances, including a television set, and cash, and the Henry Speidel grocery store, 7200 Allentown rd.—cigarettes and cash.

2 Policemen Indicted On Theft Charge

Grand Jury Returns True Bills Against Pair in Embezzlement

The District grand jury yesterday indicted two Eighth Precinct policemen on charges of stealing two air-conditioning units from a construction project last Tuesday.

Warren G. Farran, 30, 10117½ Greenwood rd., Silver Spring, Md., and Henry J. Martin, 50, 1151 New Jersey ave. nw., both suspended privates, were charged with grand larceny. The units were valued at $329.60 and were taken from the Berkshire, Inc., 4201 Mass. ave. nw., the indictment alleged.

Farran was arrested by Police Lieut. Augustus Helwig after a 2-mile chase. Helwig said he saw the officers leave the project and recovered the units in Farran's car. Martin gave himself up at the precinct station.

In other indictments returned yesterday, two persons were charged with a total of five counts of embezzlement, and two men were charged with a total of 17 counts of violating the narcotic laws.

Mrs. Peggy E. Taylor, 40, was charged with embezzling a total of more than $3600 on 10 occasions from October, 1948, to February, 1950, while employed as cashier-bookkeeper at the Middle Atlantic States Motor Carrier Conference, Inc., 211 E st. nw.

Mrs. Taylor, who lived at 2616 University pl. nw., was arrested in California, April 28.

Police say that Mrs. Taylor "overstated the amount of the company payroll," and "used incoming checks to offset differences in deposits."

Harry W. Lewis, 28, 3902 72d ave., Landover Hills, Md., was charged with embezzling a total of $300 on five occasions from Milton T. Harper, 3026 Porter st. nw. Lewis was employed by Harper as an insurance agent.

Charles H. Levister, 37, address unknown, was indicted on nine counts of selling heroin, twice to an informer and once to a police undercover man, Guy W. Holcomb, jr.

Gustephus Ebb, 22, 2016 Maryland ave. ne., was charged with selling heroin on three occasions in March to Holcomb.

Three false pretenses indictments were returned against Benjamin N. Goldberg, 54, 3917 Clay st. ne., charging him with cashing five bad checks, totaling $1430, on March 15 and 21.

Warren F. Harris, 20-year-old Quantico marine, was indicted on charges of assaulting a 23-year-woman vacationing from Detroit with intent to rape her. The alleged offense occurred in Wonder ct. sw., on May 30.

FBI Enters Death Inquiry In Maryland

The Federal Bureau of Investigation yesterday joined Maryland and D. C. police investigations of the death of a man found Saturday in a thicket near Savage, Md.

From what few definite clews investigators have, the well-dressed, middle-aged victim whose throat was found slashed, was either a Washingtonian or had Washington connections.

But is his death a murder or a suicide? What is his identity? His background?

These basic questions of a homicide investigation formed the basis on which the three-way inquiry was being conducted yesterday.

Two razor blades were found on the body, their wrappers intact.

Officers have checked and rechecked—without success — the laundry and cleaners' marks. They have established only that suit worn by the man was once cleaned at the Reliable Cleaners, 1304 Wisconsin ave. nw., at least a year ago.

The man's pockets were turned out. A wallet was missing.

A Washington streetcar transfer, dated May 9, was found on the body. So were tickets for a Baltimore theater.

The victim was 5 feet 8½ inches tall; weighed about 160 pounds, and was bald or partly bald.

A Baltimore boy of 10, who strayed while on a turtle-hunting party, came upon the body lying partl yin a shallow stream near the Washington-Baltimore blvd. in the Savage, Md., area.

Broker Loses in Suit Against Congressional Library Board

The United States Court of Appeals yesterday decided against a real estate broker who sued for $19,000 commissions in the sale of $600,000 worth of property here by the trustees of the Library of Congress Trust Fund Board.

The court, in a two-to-one decision, ruled that the trustees were an agency of the Federal Government and could not be sued on the claim in District Court.

Bringing the suit was John P. Story, trading as Story & Co. The defendant trustees were John W. Synder, Luther H. Evans, C. Wayland Brooks, Agnes E. Meyer and Adolph Miller.

Story charged that the trustees authorized him to list and sell the building at the southwest corner of 16th and I sts. nw. Through his work, Story said, in 1946 the property was purchased for $800,000 by the Motion Picture Association of America, Inc. Story said the value of his services was $19,000.

District Court dismissed the suit on the ground that the board of trustees was an agency of the United States set up by statute. The Federal government had not consented to be sued nor waived immunity from suit, the court said.

In his dissenting opinion, Judge Wilbur K. Miller said that the board of trustees was not an agency of the United States. Also, he ruled that the board had the $19,000 in commissions as trustees for Story, since it was apparently rightfully his, under the pleadings.

Justice Department Attorney Roger P. Marquis said there was no intent to deprive the broker of the value of his services. However, there were competing brokers in the sale and the Government questioned Story's right to the commission, said Marquis.

Board of Trade Group's Drive Hits $102,323

The Greater National Capital committee of the Board of Trade has received $102,323—93 percent of the $110,000 goal in its current drive, it was reported yesterday.

Two chairmen reported receipt of 100 percent of their division quotas: Edgar Balshaw, grocers, and Walter Nordinger, men's clothing. Previously reported as over the top were William A. Dyer, building and loan associations; Richard A. Norris, banks; Samuel H. Kauffmann, newspapers, and William J. McManus, utilities.

Joseph C. McGarraghy, chairman of the committee, who presided at a luncheon meeting in the Carlton Hotel, urged that "every effort be made" to reach the $110,000 quota by the end of June.

G. U. Head Hits 'Fetish of Academic Freedom'; 5000 See 1285 Graduated From University

The Washington Post

AT GEORGETOWN COMMENCEMENT—Chatting in president's office yesterday before ceremonies are, from left, the Very Rev. Hunter Guthrie, Georgetown president; the Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Archbishop of Washington; Myron C. Taylor, former representative to the Vatican State, and Chief Judge Bolitha J. Laws of District Court. Taylor and Laws were among those given honorary degrees by the university

By Lee Grove
Post Reporter

The president of Georgetown University, speaking at the university's 151st annual commencement exercises, yesterday described "the sacred fetish of academic freedom" as "the soft underbelly of our American way of life."

The Very Rev. Hunter Guthrie, S.J., told the university's 1285 graduates and some 5000 other persons that the sooner academic freedom "is armor-plated by some sensible limitation the sooner will the future of this Nation be secured from fatal consequences."

Father Guthrie's address, in which the influence of college professors and graduates in Government also came in for criticism, preceded that of the chief commencement speaker, Myron C. Taylor, former personal representative of President Roosevelt and President Truman to the Vatican State.

Receives Honorary Degree

Taylor, who retired from public life last January, was one of six persons to receive honorary doctor of laws degrees in the outdoor exercises before the gray stone Healy Building.

The others to receive the hoods of purple, denoting the LL.D. degree, and lined with Georgetown's blue and gray, were: Chief Judge Bolitha J. Laws of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia; Maj. Gen. Paul R. Hawley, director of the administrative board, American College of Surgeons; Charles F. Williams, president, Western & Southern Life Insurance Co., and member of the University Alumni Association's board of governors; Thomas E. Leavey, founder and director of the Farmer's Insurance Group and chairman of the Western States endowment drive for the university's McDonough Memorial Gymnasium, and, posthumously, John A. Coakley, who was president of Automatic Sprinkler Co. and a prominent Catholic layman. His degree was accepted by his son, John A. Coakley, jr.

Father Guthrie said two test questions come to mind "when the matter of academic freedom is discussed. The first: is the matter being taught true or false? And the second: if it is false, and presented as such, may one prudently suppose that a good and not an evil will eventuate from its exposition? The true and the good, then, are the natural limitations of freedom," Father Guthrie said, adding that "this is not an area for opinion."

Telling his audience, "Education controls your life, not only as to what you shall think, but how you will be taxed," Father Guthrie said, "for the past few years columnists and comedians have been poking fun at the college professors in government.

"Despite this harmless barb, these professors and college trained men, the products of a disastrous and ill-defined academic freedom, have taken over the State Department, the judiciary, the budget, the myriad agencies of the Government, and have transformed our ways of thinking and living and acting beyond recognition as to what they were several decades ago.

Instead of reexamining the system of education which produced these men, otherwise responsible citizens have futilely hurled criticism against the man themselves, and in some notable instances have continued handsomely to support the schools which produced them," he said.

Taylor told the graduates they are not "entering a world of sunlight and happiness," but he could not "commiserate" with them because "it is in periods of great troubles, as the present, when men have the most direct challenge and widest opportunity to build creatively, to cast their influence in great causes, and to lead mankind to better ways of life."

Concluding with "a personal word," he recalled his diplomatic duties at the Vatican and said, "Pope Pius XII stands today in the world as a great spiritual figure, and as an heroic one. He has been undaunted by the onrush of the forces inimical to religious freedom, to a true peace, and to the preservation of the precious heritage of mankind on which Western civilization and advancement are founded."

The Mos Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Archbishop of Washington, in a brief address at the conclusion of the exercises, praised Taylor for his assistance to "the poor, the sick, the starving and the underprivileged."

Final Class Graduating at Central High

Central High alumni are trying to find some way of preserving the name of the school through the purchase of a building to house the school's many memorials and trophies, Hoover said yesterday.

They include a Chinese room, the gift of Dr. Alfred Sze, a former Ambassador from China; wall murals in the library depicting the search for the Holy Grail, a memorial to Central students killed in World War I, and the many athletic trophies won by the school.

Virginia U. Gives Degrees To 936 Men

Charlottesville, Va., June 12 (AP). Dr. Anton J. Carlson told members of the University of Virginia's largest graduating class here today that man has not yet demonstrated he is fit to survive upon the earth.

Man must plan for a least a million years ahead if he is to survive and to flourish in a democratic civilization, the noted physiologist of the University of Chicago declared.

Dr. Carlson, former president of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, said that "evidence is now very clear that the present people of the world is one race and one species," he went on. "But this has certainly not yet reached the understanding of the majority of human beings if we judge by their thinking and behavior."

Before Dr. Carlson spoke, degrees were conferred on 936 graduates from 37 States and 6 foreign countries by University President Colgate W. Darden. A final ball tonight concluded the three-day commencement.

After hearing the baccalaureate sermon yesterday morning, the university graduates said their formal farewell at class exercises and then were guests with their families, the faculty and alumni at a reception given by President and Mrs. Darden.

St. John's Graduates 28, Honors Alumnus

Annapolis, Md., June 12 (AP).—St. John's honored one of its old-school graduates at the 158th college commencement today.

Dr. Amos F. Hutchins, urologist and surgeon, received the first award of merit bestowed by the St. John's Alumni Association.

Hutchins a resident of nearby Arnold, was graduated in 1906, years before St. John's inaugurated its "great books" program of higher education.

This was the tenth commencement under that program. Twenty-eight men received bachelor of arts degrees for completing the four-year course based on study of 100 important volumes of western civilization and culture.

Falls Church Will Act on Storm Drains

The Falls Church City Council last night agreed to take action to improve storm drains after an irate citizen charged that the city manager was "inept."

Dudley G. Bostwick, 402 North West st., Falls Church, asserted at a council meeting that the city had spent $6200 on his street, and the situation was "worse than before."

He declared that City Manager Roy S. Dun "is to blame for the mud holes we live in" and said "the situation is a disgrace."

Lee M. Rhoades, chairman of the council's finance committee said that the city ran out of money after it began the West st. project.

On motion of Sherman Wells, council member, the council agreed to use $1000 from its contingency fund, and $850 from unspent street cleaning funds to finish the West st. storm drainage project and other storm drains in the city. If the funds prove insufficient, the City will borrow to complete the work.

In another action, the council told its finance committee to study a proposal to earmark any money received from the Fairfax County-Falls Church annexation settlement for capital improvements in the present city.

The suit now is in court. A settlement of about $113,000 is expected.

Rhoades told the council that he expects that the tax rate for Falls Church during 1951 will be "substantially lower" than the rate for 1950.

The council voted to cooperate with the Purcellville, Va., Chamber of Commerce in opposing the proposed abolition of the railroad mail service on the Washington & Old Dominion Railroad by the Postoffice Department.

Catholic Youth Fund $1000 Oversubscribed

YMCA Faces Loss of Tax Exemption In District

Judge Curran Rules Organization's Claim Under 1894 Statute Is Not Applicable

By Benjamm Bradlee
Post Reporter

The atx exemption of the Washington YMCA was seriously threatened in District Court yesterday.

Judge Edward M. Curran ruled that an 1894 statute, under which exemption has been successfully claimed for almost 50 years, did not in fact exempt the YMCA as presently constituted.

His decision came in a case filed by the YMCA for the recovery of $3300 paid in real estate taxes on its 11-story building at 1740 G st. nw. The District countered with a motion to dismiss the Y's claim, and Judge Curran granted this motion yesterday.

Assistant Corporation Counsel George Lynch argued that the 1894 statute exempted the "YMCA of the District of Columbia," which was then the Negro YMCA. The present YMCA is the "YMCA for the City of Washington," which includes all Ys and is not specifically tax exempt by statute, he said.

Walter M. Bastian, attorney for the YMCA, argued that for 50 years the YMCA had been granted exemption by the District Government on property while it is used for YMCA purposes.

The $3300 tax was for fiscal 1943, a period during which the 11-story building was being constructed.

The District government originally assessed the YMCA for taxes on the grounds that while under construction the building was "not being used for YMCA purposes."

Lynch admitted after Judge Curran's ruling that at the time the suit was filed for the 1943 taxes, the District believed that YMCA property was exempt under the 1894 law while it was being used for YMCA purposes.

It was not until "two months ago," Lynch said, while the 1894 statute was being studied closely, that the corporation counsel's office decided that the YMCA was in no way exempt.

District Assessor Edward A. Dent said that as a result of Judge Curran's decision he will "reexamine the entire tax exemption status of the YMCA."

Judge Curran gave Bastian 15 days in which to find another statute under which the YMCA might be entitled to tax exemption.

Curran was reluctant to rule against the YMCA. "I can't see why it shouldn't be exempted, but I've got to follow the law," he said.

Corrections Chief Snares Lorton Inmate

By luck yesterday, Director Donald Clemmer of the District Department of Corrections captured a pajama-clad prisoner who had escaped from the District Workhouse at Occoquan, Va., nine hours earlier.

Bloodhounds and extra patrols of workhouse guards had not had much success in locating the man, Maxie T. Harlee, 29, according to authorities.

Clemmer said he was cruising along Ox rd., about 5 miles from the institution, when he saw Harlee ride out of a patch of woods.

The District official said he drew alongside the prisoner and said:

"Ok, you can park the bike and get into the auto."

Harlee offered little resistance, Clemmer added.

School Budget Cuts' Restoration Sought

Representatives of Parent-Teacher Associations last night called for restoration of cuts in the Montgomery County school budget at a hearing in the Rockville courthouse.

The county school board has asked for an increase of $860,000 over the budget for last year. County Manager Irving C. McNarr has asked for a total budget of $4,269,388, an increase of $676,000 over last year's figure.

David M. Weed, president of the Montgomery County Council of P-TAs, said that an increased attendance of about 4000 children is expected in the county next year. He said that would require an increase in the budget of at least $800,000.

The county manager's proposed budget would give teachers half of the difference between current salaries and the standard salary schedule. It plans to give the other half, which would bring teachers up to schedule, next year. The school board proposal would make up the entire difference this year.

Frederick P. Lee, president of the council, explained the salary situation and said that teachers had indicated they would be satisfied with McNayr's plan. About 500 teachers are up to the schedule now and 300 are below scale, Lee said.

Mrs. James V. Bennett and Mrs. Justin Edgerton, representing the League of Women Voters, said the league had approved of the county manager's plan as a realistic half-step toward achievement of the standard pay scale.

Dr. Leslie W. Ball of the Clifton Park Citizens Association presented a resolution asking that construction of schools for apartment areas be delayed until older single-residence communities have been taken care of.

The council has until the end of the month to act on the budget for next year. Another hearing will be held at 7:30 p. m. today on all other items in the county budget.

You may feel that your telephone is well worth having just for the calls you make. But oftentimes the calls you receive are equally important.

Think for a moment how many good times have begun with the ring of your telephone bell. Perhaps you remember a call that saved you a needless trip, or hours of time, or considerable expense. There may have been others, in times of crisis, that put your mind at ease.

Yes, there is friendship, security, convenience and reassurance in your telephone. That's why so many folks agree that telephone service is one of the biggest bargains they buy.

At Democratic Club Luncheon

Sen. Sparkman Renews Appeal For Middle-Income Housing Aid

SENATOR JOHN J. SPARKMAN (D., Ala.) yesterday was still appealing for support for his cooperative housing program for middle-income families.

The housing plan, which has been rejected this session by both the House of Representatives and the Senate, would "fill the gap" in the over-all Federal housing program, Senator Sparkman said at a luncheon meeting of the Women's National Democratic Club.

He explained that persons making less than $2500 are covered by the Government's low-income housing program; that persons making more than $5000 can afford to buy houses through the FHA. But the families in between have virtually no housing benefits, the Senator said.

Senator Sparkman's plan would grant Federal aid to private cooperative housing projects. He estimates house loans could be granted with from 3 to 3¼ percent interest. The average monthly payment would be approximately $55. The Senator compared this with the $85-$90 monthly payment for the average FHA insured house.

The Senator then outlined the Government's current housing program, including slum clearance, farm building assistance and aid to private builders.

He said this country's builders would have to turn out 1½ million housing units a year for the next 10 years to accomodate the growing population. And he was optimistic about this year's quota. Builders would top last year's record of 1,019,000 new units if they keep up their fast pace, he said. But there is a chance that a "touch of inflation" might slow down production toward the end of the year.

The Senator from Alabama just barely made his speaking engagement at the clubhouse. He stayed on the Senate floor long enough to vote against recommittal of the bill to extend Federal rent control and arrived at the luncheon an hour late to report that the motion to send the bill back to the Senate Banking Committee was defeated.

"If we had sufficient housing, we would not have to be debating rent control," he stated.

Mrs. Fred Morrison, president of the club, presided. Mrs. Oscar Chapman, wife of the Secretary of the Interior, introduced the speaker. Among the special guests for the last program luncheon of the season was Mrs. Alben Barkley, the Veep's bride.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Having Dismissed Several Suitors in Obedience To Parents' Counsel, Girl, 29, Longs to Marry Older Man, but Mother Advises "No Commitments"

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Which is more important in a mate, cultural background and finesse or ordinary rearing and plain common sense?

I am 29, an only child with a high school education plus three years of music conservatory. I have been engaged several times and thought I was in love, but after my parents' counsel and my self-searching, these friendships were disintegrated, for which I am indeed thankful now. My father is a very noble man, highly respected. He puts great stress on the financial status of any eligible man. Mother is artistic, talented, high-strung, very well read and very ambitious for me as well as herself.

For two years I have been dating John, who is 38, has been married once and has a child. He has a high school education, high principles, a mediocre job and no particular interest in cultural things. However, he attends all my concerts, seems quite proud of me and tries to be appreciative. We have grand times together, boating, fishing, hiking, etc. and he is serious about me. But mother just recently came to the conclusion that marriage to him would be the great mistake of my life.

Man Is Earthy But Very Nice

MOTHER says that John and I aren't on the same plane, that our concepts of life and approach to the finer things are entirely different. She says that I must remember that I haven't met many persons of my caliber, but that I may have a chance before long. She tells me not to commit myself in any way. I am very confused. After all, I'm not 20, and I feel I should be starting a home of my own—the great desire of my life.

As for a career in music, it is wonderful as a sideline, but marriage and a home seem more important and more lasting to me. Should I renounce John, inasmuch as he lacks esthetic awareness of the arts? Or would I be wise to marry this earthy but substantial and very nice man? I would miss him terribly if we parted, but is that love, I wonder? Or is it just because of our steady closeness? I haven't yet dated the type that mother prefers. Your views will be much appreciated. C. D.

DEAR C. D.: Your rambling letter has been organized and condensed, thus giving a more immediate picture of the real problem, which seemed hidden from you at the time of writing.

Boiled down, your narrative makes clear—as even you must see at this reading—that your development as a person is being blocked by your mother, a foolish, pretentious, blindly selfish mom-type. Her management of you is anything but helpful. Quite innocently you disclose that she has in the past maneuvered the break-up of any relationships that might have weaned you from filial clinging and led you into paths of maturity. Now she's at it again, in respect to John.

In all probability you are more nearly "on the same plane" with John than you would be with the cultural elite that your mother venerates in fancy. People gravitate to their own kind, indeed seem to attract them out of the blue—even as birds of a feather get together. So if you were the esthetic type, really and truly, you would have struck some affiliations with other esthetes by now. As there are none in your life, I gather your mother and not the Muse goaded you towards musicianship.

Girl Must Learn to Use Her Head

THE fact that you have grand times with John and would "miss him terribly" suggests that you have a great fund of "ordinary" human feelings in common with him, which is a healthier basis for enduring relatedness than shared "artistic" preciosity. The latter is pretty thin fare as compared to the substantial saisfaction inherent in "earthy" congeniality.

However, please understand that I'm not trying to sell John to you as the answer to prayer. If he is divorced, his capacity for adequate conjugal cooperation is open to question. You must decide from personal knowledge of his history what kind of partnership risk he would be. He may be in flight from marriage after his one venture, and his dating loyalty to you may simply mean that he feels safe from "takers" in your company—on the hunch that you'll never act on a marriage offer.

Furthermore, until you've recognized and outgrown your major hindrance of letting your parents (or other "authority") do your thinking for you, even to the age of 29, you're hardly qualified to marry anybody, in terms of giving the spouse a fair break. For advice, you need expert help in negotiating a working relationship between your head and your heart, so that you will dare to act in accordance with what you think best in disputed cases. M. H.

Side-to-Side Weaving of Colors Achieves Nice Balance for Room Decoration, Reader Is Advised

DEAR ANNE:

I have a lamp-shade problem. The two sofa lamp bases are marble effect and another lamp in living room and one in dinette are hand-made of wood. I'd like to tie them all together with the same kind and color of lamp shade.

Living room and dinette open into each other and walls of both are painted beige or light tan. Summer drapes and rugs are both green. Slip covers are black, aqua-green, red and gray of rather large pattern on sofa and one chair while the other two chairs are done in red with aqua binding and aqua with red binding. Also, what do you suggest for winter floor covering which I'd like to be wall to wall? Slip covers will remain the same.

M. K. M., Washington.

Since you already have considerable color in your apartment, perhaps neutral lamp shades would provide a restful link between the rooms. Grey, picking up the sofa background, white or even beige to reflect your walls, might do the trick. Or, if your taste is sophisticated, you might look for black parchment shades touched with gold—although these may prove more difficult to find.

Unless you particularly wish identical shades, it is not necessary from a decorating standpoint to match them. Usually a room accessory is most effective if it balances off the distribution of color in the room. In other words, on the side where you have a red chair, you might want to repeat the grey used across the room, and on the predominantly grey side, echo the red. This weaving of colors back and forth really ties a room together better than any blanket prescription of uniform shades. (Of course, where lamp bases are paired, the shades should follow suit.)

For winter floor covering, perhaps grey would blend best into the color scheme you describe and at the same time be most practical and easy to find.

DEAR ANNE:

I intend to store household linens and bed clothing in wooden foot lockers which may have to remain stored in our basement for more than a year.

Please tell me what precautions to take beside paradichlorobenzene for blankets and other woolens. Do sheets and fine tablecloths turn yellow when stored unless some precautions are taken?

Mrs. C. A. M., Arlington, Va.

Having the blankets absolutely clean before storing is important, as you doubtless realize. Use a liberal supply of paradichlorobenzene in packing. Place the blankets in one of the plastic blanket cases now available, or wrap in brown paper and seal packages with gummed paper tape. The P.D.B. inside will kill any insects present and the cases or paper will protect against further invasion. Another idea would be to have them mothproofed by a firm doing such work. One here that guarantees its moth-proofing "forever" can be contacted by telephoning WIsconsin 8844.

As to the linens, be sure to put them away clean and minus starch. The latter attracts silverfish, who love to dine upon it and chew through the cloth as they do so. There may be a little yellowing, but you can bleach the things out later if such occurs. Putting them away clean and protecting them with plenty of fresh paper is the only way to guard against discolorations. There could be mildewing. If the basement is damp you will be taking a chance.

PAINTINGS by Grandma Moses are reproduced on the engaging new fabric of this slipcover. The cloth features "Childhood Home" and "Williamstown" and is as colorful as the originals by America's foremost primitive painter. It's available at the Hecht Co. for use in making draperies, slipcovers, screens, cornices, valances, place mats, and the new circular skirts

DEAR ANNE:

I have recently become a widow. A couple of my friends have introduced me by my maiden name. I immediately corrected them, reminding them that I had lost my husband through death and couldn't use my maiden name, even if I wished. Was I right? Also, is it proper to remove one's rings?

Mrs. D. R., Washington.

You were absolutely correct. You retain your husband's name in full—Mrs. Donald Rice, for instance—unless you marry again.

The rings you continue to wear on your left hand. If you become engaged again, transfer the rings to your right hand. You remove them entirely on the morning of your second marriage and, of course, do not wear them thereafter.

DEAR ANNE:

Some time ago you gave a recipe for corning beef. In this you mentioned saltpeter. Where may I purchase this? I live in the suburbs of D. C.

E. B., Washington.

Saltpeter (chemical name, potassium nitrate) can be bought at almost all drugstores. One of Washington's largest drug chains, which doubtless has a branch in your neighborhood, carries it for certain. You can call Hobart 1234 to learn the address of the store nearest you.

DEAR ANNE:

I have a very nice baby carriage three years and one baby old. Can you tell me how to treat it to prevent cracking during the hot summer months so it will last for future babies? P. L., Kensington, Md.

Wash the leather hood with saddle soap or suds made of mild laundry soap. Rinse with damp, clean cloth and dry thoroughly. Then apply a leather conditioning preparation, which restores and preserves the natural oils. After this has soaked in and dried, wipe off any surplus, and apply a thin coat of floor wax, to keep out moisture and prevent mildew. Metal and wooden parts should also be washed and waxed.

It's best to collapse the hood before storing, but in doing so, place rolls of newspaper in the folds, so that sharp creases won't be formed. These cause cracking if the carriage remains unused for long. Then, for added protection, wrap the whole carriage in heavy brown paper or heavy cloth. Store in a relatively dry place where it will not be subject to extremes of heat and cold. Posterity will surely thank you for your trouble.

PETUNIA!

I can't be economical . . .
And blushing, I confess,
The cash I waste on spoiled food
Would buy a Paris dress!

For shame, Petunia! You should have put the remainder of those pimientos in a small glass jar and sealed it with paraffin. That way they'd keep practically forever.

MRS. E. C. GATHINGS, wife of the Representative from Arkansas, and daughter, Tolise, carefully handle the magnificent silk kimono which the Japanese soprano, Hizi Koyke, will wear when she sings the role of Mme. Butterfly Thursday at the opening performance of the Watergate's second annual Grand Opera Festival. The priceless kimono, and other costumes worn by the cast, will be exhibited to the public today in the Board Room of the YWCA, 17th and K sts. nw., from 2 to 7 p. m. Mme. Butterfly Wear Japan's Finest Silk

By Peggy Preston

IN THE world of fabrics, pure silk is still the queen. And never is it given more regal treatment than in the exquisite kimono which Kizi Koyke will wear here Thursday in the role of Puccini's Mme. Butterfly.

The celebrated Japanese soprano will sing the role in the opening performance of Washington's second annual Watergate Grand Opera Festival, presented by the San Carlo Company. Both she and other members of the cast will be costumed in pure silk robes, but one of hers, for sheer beauty, will outshine the rest.

It is the pale peach, gold threaded kimono which she wears in the joyous scene immediately following the wedding scene of the opera. The fabric, soft as a moth's wing, was made for her by the Silk Institute of her native land as a tribute to her talent and international acclaim.

Symbol of Elegance

TRUE artistry has gone into the design of the silk. It is a brocade weave, and woven into it from the waist of the kimono to the hem are colorful peonies, the Japanese symbol of elegance. The flowers, in such hues as deep crimson, gray, green and white, are outlined in gold thread, also woven into the original piece of silk.

The kimono itself, is an example of the beautiful hand work done by native seamstresses. An ancient craft, the first kimono was made in Japan more than 2000 years ago, and certain style points are faithfully adhered to. Long sleeves, for instance, are the symbol of girlhood, and are worn by the unmarried. Married women wear shorter sleeves, of the type used in Mme. Koyke's robe.

The Silk Institute of Japan has as its object the improvement and progress of the nation's silk industry, disrupted during the war years. One of its patrons is her imperial highness, Princess Kan-in, widow of the second son of Emperor Meiji.

On Display Today

A PUBLIC exhibition of the silk robes will be held today in the board room of the YWCA, from 2 to 7 p. m. The exhibit is sponsored by the art section of the Y's adult education department.

Mme. Koyke, called by operagoers everywhere the world's most convincing Mme. Butterfly, has sung the role nearly 500 times. Born in Japan, she was educated in a Methodist mission school and made her operatic debut in 1927, at the age of 18.

The opera, in which she will star here on Thursday at 8:30 p. m., is the first in a series of 10 to be presented during the festival which closes June 25. The company is under the direction of Fortune Gallo.

Jean Arthur's Hit Is Heartwarming

By Richard L. Coe

NOW WHOEVER WOULD have thought that Jean Arthur and "Peter Pan" would turn into one of the hits of the season?

That such is the case one can have no doubt after a Sunday afternoon at New York's Imperial Theater, erstwhile home of Ethel Merman in her numberless hits.

And what an enchantment this Barrie revival is! The story of the Neverneverland has been sparklingly staged by John Burrell, an Old Vic old hand, and Miss Arthur is wondrous grand as the wise little boy who didn't want to ever grow up. Though it's extra special to watch with a houseful of youngsters, you probably glean as much enjoyment as an adult for, alas, Peter's hunch is something best understood after childhood. Wasn't it Shaw who regretted that youth was wasted on the young?

Miss Arthur has done a truly sensational job on herself as Peter. She's shorn her blonde movie tresses and has close-cropped hair which at first glance looks chestnut. She uses that cracked voice of hers to perfection; it's that of a lad whose voice is on the verge of changing. Her movements have an unself-conscious grace, and when she flies to stage center for that wistful, "To die must be a very great experience," she hits you right in the heart.

The screen star's triumph is the more heartwarming when one considers her numberless ups and downs. A pretty ingenue once, she dropped out of sight to rise again as a comedienne. During the out-of-town tryout of "Born Yesterday," she dropped out (still an unexplained mystery) and Judy Holliday soared to fame in Jean's part. She's been quietly going to a university lately and, last year, didn't find too much interest when she set out to wear Peter's cap.

Producers Peter Lawrence and R. L. Stevens plotted a production that cost more than $100,000, which sounds like a steep sum for what might well have had only small fry appeal on Broadway. A large cast, trick scenery, the expenses of flying four actors—as defined by Barrie, not the airlines—and a full-sized orchestra put it in the class of a musical show budget. It took more than a year to get the money, but now there's a $150,000 advance sale at the box office.

It took some daring, too, for Miss Arthur to play the role so indelibly identified with Maude Adams, now teaching drama at Stevens College. Miss Adams played Peter first in 1905 and, off and on, spent 10 years in the role. Marilyn Miller and Eva Le Gallienne both played it in the 20s, but it's not had a New York showing for 20 years now.

Those famed flying scenes—Peter, Wendy, Michael and John—are the happiest things on Broadway. They're under the direction of London's Kirby's Flying Ballet; years ago, flying ballets were enormously popular in our theaters, but to do this job safely and effectively, the still active Londoners had to be imported.

Ralph Alswang has had to design his three settings to allow flight lanes for his actors, and he's also had another tough assignment—Tinker Bell. Tinker, as you may recall, is the frisky sprite who helps find Peter's shadow and in general act as his guardian angel. Tinker is only a ball of light who darts about walls, ceilings, into a bureau drawer and, finally, into a tiny cage to die.

Alswang has cast hundreds of tiny light bulbs hidden in the scenery as Tinker, manipulated at a special keyboard in the wings.

In Miss Adams' first production, Tinker was a ball of light reflected through a mirror, but before the star was through with playing Peter, she'd invented much the same device. Miss Audrey Ridgewell, who played Michael during Miss Adams' final engagements, passed this information along to me after I told her about Miss Arthur's production, which she'd not yet seen. Miss Adams, she pointed out, had always been extremely inventive about stage detail, so it's possible Alswang's notion for Tinker has something in common with Miss Adams'.

Boris Karloff enjoys himself playing both the children's father, Mr. Darling, and Captain Hook, the pirate king whose left hand was snipped off by a crocodile whose bely also accomodates a noisy alarm clock.

There is an up-to-1950 tone in Neverneverland in the kids' costumes and the dancing Indians, but since that is simply a contemporary touch of eternal childhood, I've no fault to find with this and might duel anyone who does.

The New York revival in 45th st. plays matinees Wednesdays, Saturdays and Sundays, with evening performances Tuesdays through Saturdays. Box office prices are $1.20 to $3.60 matinees and $1.80 to $4.80 evenings. It's sure admission to no-atomland.

N. Y. Experts See Grave Dangers in Spinal Anesthesia

Atlantic City, N. J., June 12 (AP). A New York nerve specialist today reported spinal anesthesia can cause grave spinal cord damage and produce paralysis of the legs.

Dr. Foster Kennedy, head of the neurological department at Bellevue Hospital, said spinal anesthesia "should be reserved for those patients unable to accept local or general anesthetic."

Kennedy and two other New York doctors, Abraham S. Effron and Gerald Perry, reported to the opening session of the seventy-fifth annual meeting of the American Neurological Association.

They said complications appear weeks or months after a patient has had a spinal injection.

The question of spinal anesthesia has been a controversial one for some time. Anesthetists have claimed the method, properly employed, will produce no ill effect.

Truman News Session This Week Is Unlikely

President Truman probably will call off his news conference this week for the second straight week.

He usually holds them on Thursday and that is the day he is going to Quantico, Va., to watch Marine Corps maneuvers.

Presidential Secretary Charles G. Ross yesterday said there will be no news conference this week unless unforeseen developments require one.

Glen Echo Is Promised Sewage Relief

More than 100 persons attending the year's first Democratic precinct meeting in the Glen Echo (Md.) area last night heard encouraging news about sewage relief from the head of the Washington Sanitary Commission.

Warren H. Browning, one of four speakers on coming campaign issues, said contracts would let June 28 for construction of the main feeder line for sewage from Brookmont to Cabin John Creek. Lines from Glen Echo Heights will connect with it, Browning said.

Vivian V. Simpson, Maryland secretary of State, told the gathering that to have "better schools, better roads, and better hospitals, we must face the fact that they cost money."

Warren C. Burrage, planning engineer for the Maryland National Capitol Parks and Planning Commission, said that 80 percent of the land had been purchased for the Memorial Highway from Brookmont to Great Falls. He estimated the remainder will cost $300,000.

Andrew Anthony, treasurer of the precinct organization, told the group that two schools already under construction in the precinct should be completed by 1951, while a third is planned by 1952.

Philip Thorson, chairman of the Third Precinct, Seventh District, presided at the meeting in the Glen Echo Fire House.

McClenon Is Elected Civic Head

Walter H. McClenon of the Takoma Park Citizens Association last night was elected president of the Montgomery County Civic Federation at its final meeting of the season.

Also elected at the meeting, in the Bethesda Elementary School, were: Henry H. Snelling of the Chevy Chase Citizens Association, vice president; Wayne Birdsell, Woodside Park Civic Association, recording secretary; Mrs. W. W. Rubey, Westmoreland Hills Citizens Association, corresponding secretary, and William K. Hodges, Bethesda Chamber of Commerce, treasurer.

Elected to the executive committee were: Blair Lee, 3d, Silver Spring Board of Trade; O. W. Anderson, Montgomery County Farm Bureau; Stephen Duvall, jr., Cabin John Park Citizens Association, and H. P. Morris, Woodside Park Civic Association.

In other actions the organization urged the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission to purchase land in the county for completion of the George Washington Memorial pkwy.; recommended that the county council purchase the Bliss Electrical School in Silver Spring as a site for the Montgomery County Junior High School; reiterated disapproval of "Bill 19" providing for a department of public libraries in the county; urged that hearings be held when the bill comes before the executive session of the county council.

Greenbelt Council Votes Tax Rate Cut

The Greenbelt, Md., city council last night lowered its present tax rate from $3.1195 to $2.9665 for each $100 property valuation.

Few people, however, will feel the immediate effects of the reductions as most of the city's residents pay no taxes on real estate because their land is owned by the Government.

The Government this year contributed $165,638.16 in lieu of taxes toward a total budget of $220,392.28.

In other action, the council transferred $6847 from the budget into its reserve fund and appropriated $1900 to uniform the Greenbelt Community band.

Telephone Rates To Jump in Two Va. Developments

Telephone rates for tenants of apartments in Arlington Village and Colonial Village will jump July 1.

Use of the PBX telephone service will cost $1.50 a month, while individual calls will be 10 cents. At present no service charge is made and calls cost only 5 cents.

Gustave Ring, operator of the two housing developments, said the new schedule of charges will be necessary to enable the service to break even.

I. C. Buchanan, rent director for Alexandria and Arlinugton and Fairfax Counties, said that the matter was ont within cognizance of his office since Virginia is being rent decontrolled June 25 and the phone hike is effective July 1.

Apparition at Fatima To Be Marked Today

A service at 12:30 p. m. today at St. Patrick's Church, 10th and G sts. nw., will mark the thirty-third anniversary of the apparition of the Blessed Virgin to three children at Fatima, Portugal.

The service is sponsored by the Legion of Mary, and will include prayers for world peace and a sermon by the Rev. Charles D. Gorman, assistant pastor of the Shrine of the Blessed Sacrament. Similar services will be held on the thirteenth of July, August, September, and October, the anniversaries of later apparitions.

Non-Partisan

Dugan Wins Nomination In Arlington

Arlington County's nonpartisan "Town Meeting" last night nominated Daniel A. Dugan, incumbent chairman of the County Board, as its candidate for the board in the November general election.

Dugan, a Civil Service Commission employe, defeated George J. Freisem, who works for the General Accounting Office, by a vote of 440 to 45.

About 700 Arlington residents who favor the nonpartisan election system turned out last night for the Town Meeting at the Thomas Jefferson Junior High School. Among the 700 were some nonvoting observers, however.

Dugan will run against Democratic candidate Fred W. Bach for the four-year post. Bach, as the only Democratic candidate who filed for the county board seat, does not need indorsement in the primary.

Dugan, 34, lives at 1021 N. Jefferson st., Arlington, with his wife and one son. He was first elected to the board in 1946.

His platform, presented last night, included:

1. Fair and equitable regulation of all public utilities.
2. "Continued efforts" for a "equitable assessment of real property."
3. Adoption of a six-year master plan for the development of Arlington, with a sewage treatment plant first on the list of needed improvements.
4. Cooperation with the school board.
5. Attempts to secure a larger share of State funds from gasoline and other taxes.
6. Removal of slum housing in land zoned for business and industry to "hasten the development of these areas by business and industrial corporations."

Appeals Court Grants Review To Holober

Richmond, Va., June 12 (AP).—The Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals today agreed to review the case of Charles Francis Holober, 41, who was sentenced to death for killing his wife.

Holober, a former Washington taxicab driver, was to have been electrocuted June 15. The court's action automatically stays it in execution until the case is disposed of.

Fairfax County Circuit Court Judge Paul E. Brown, on receiving word of the high court's action, ordered a stay of Holober's execution until December 15. Holober's attorney, T. Brooke Howard, said he expected the appeal would be argued before the Virginia Supreme Court sometime in October.

A petition for a writ of error was presented orally last Tuesday to Justice Willis D. Miller by Howard.

The bodies of Holober's wife and 10-months old baby daughter were found February 27, 1949, buried in an abandoned nudist camp in Fairfax County.

Holober admitted prior to his trial in Fairfax Circuit Court that he shot his wife and buried her and the baby, still alive, in the nudist camp grave. He pleaded insanity.

His petition for a writ or error contended that the Fairfax jury failed to give proper consideration to the insanity plea and that the trial judge committed error in remarks and instructions to the jury.

TV Audience Hears Suicide's Shot at Texas Ball Game

Houston, Tex., June 12 (AP).—Houston television followers heard a 50-year-old laundryman commit suicide last night at a Texas League baseball game.

Stanford B. Twente shot himself to death as he sat beside telecaster Dick Gottlieb in a press box at Buffalo Stadium. The shot was heard over television and throughout the stadium. Seconds later a TV camera focused on Twente's slumped body.

Justice of the Peace Tom Maes was among those watching the game on television. He returned an inquest verdict of suicide without leaving his home.

"I saw the man on television," Maes told Detective George Chapman.

Police had a report a half-hour before the shooting that Twente had told a waitress he was going to kill himself and "to watch me at the end of the fifth."

Virginia Doctors Get Right to Call On D. C. Patients

The District Commission on Licensure yesterday restored the right of Virginia doctors to treat patients in the District providing the physicians pay a license fee.

The new regulation will become effective July 1 at the same time a reciprocal arrangement for District doctors goes into operation in Virginia.

The District revoked the license arrangement for Virginia doctors last year to provoke Virginia into repealing a regulation that required District doctors to pay a $50 fee. Substituted was a requirement that Virginia doctors pay a dollar for each patient. The Virginia General Assembly in February approved the $1 reciprocal fee.

Two Change Edwards Trial Testimony

Baltimore, June 12 (AP).—Two witnesses changed their testimony today as the State tried for the second time to prove that Thomas Alexander Edwards killed a young Glen Burnie couple almost two years ago.

With tears in his eyes, John E. Kline, father of one, the dead girl, said he had been wrong in testifying 17 months ago that there was a heavy dew the morning after his daughter disappeared.

"I just wasn't responsible for what I was saying then," Kline testified today. "The grass was dry. It's clearer now. It was not wet."

Sergeant E. Brooke Meade of the Anne Arundel County police force acknowledged he had been wrong at the first trial when he fixed the date that he and other officers made an intensive search of the ground where the bodies of the young couple were discovered.

Sgt. Meade said in the past week he had found some old notes he made at the time and they showed his testimony at the first trial was in error.

Edwards, who worked in a Baltimore sugar refinery, is charged with slaying 25-year-old John Mahlan, Glen Burnie postal worker, and Mary Kline, an 18-year-old redhead he dated about once a week, on September 17.

Edwards was sentenced to hang after the first trial. Maryland's Court of Appeals found two confessions had been improperly obtained by the State and granted a new trial.

The changes in testimony today were brought out by William J. McWilliams, former Anne Arundel County judge appointed by the court to defend Edwards. He sought to cast little shadows of doubt on every phase of the State's circumstantial case as 11 witnesses went to the stand.

Three Men On a Lobby Horse

There is a fight on in the Congress of the United States. Rep. Frank Buchanan of Penn., Chairman of the House Lobby Committee, is trying to get some simple facts about a group of so-called patriots who have been spending gigantic sums to flood the Nation with their dirty propaganda . . . The three key figures involved are Edward Rumely, Merwin Hart and Joseph Kamp.

Two Congressmen are trying to prevent the investigating committee from getting the facts—Eugene Cox of Ga. and Clare Hoffman of Mich. The other day Hoffman tried tossing a legal monkey wrench into the probers' machinery by demanding an investigation of the committee's actions . . . Before we finish we'll tell you why.

First let's expose the three peculiar patriots who are squealing behind legal technicalities about subpoenas issued against them.

Specimen No. 1: Edward Rumely: The executive director—for big pay—of his outfit since 1937. Rumely was convicted in December, 1920, for using German money for propaganda during WW I, and failing to report the funds to the Alien Property Custodian. He served a month in the Federal pen; then got himself pardoned.

Here's what Senator G. D. Aiken, the Vermont Republican, told the Senate in May, '47, about Rumely's outfit: "I submit that much of the literature circulated by this committee is inflammatory, biased, and propagandistic . . . material which has tended to incite class against class . . . I believe that the Congress should have the power to investigate any organization in this country, to ascertain the facts as to its financing, where it gets its money, how it spends its money, and, more important than that, who are its real backers."

Patriot No. 2: Merwin Hart: The brain behind his hate group, in 1940 Hart declared: "It is time to brush aside this word 'democracy'" . . . On October 6, 1949, Cong. S. R. Yates of Ill. placed in the Cong. Rec. the latest report of the Americanism Commission of the Amer. Legion, Dept. of Ill., entitled "Subversive Activities of Hate Groups." Here's what the Legion declared: "These organizations are anti-American since they pit class against class, race against race, and creed against creed . . . Hart operates his Economic Council with an aura of respectability. Recently, Hart abandoned his subtle innuendoes and showed his true character by resorting to anti-Semitic items in his publications and speeches."

Propagandist No. 3: Joseph P. Kamp: While trying to duck Buchanan he is also packing his bags for a four-month "vacation" in the Federal hoose-gow because he did the same thing once before. A Grand Jury in 1944 indicted him for refusing to reveal his contributors. He was convicted and, despite Cong. Hoffman's intervention, was sentenced to serve time. Recently the United States Supreme Court denied his appeal.

The Legion also named Kamp in its subversive activities report: "Constitutional Educational League, N. Y. Main activity is pamphleteering. Pamphlets issued by the group try to create religious hostility. In its accusations of 'Communist infiltration,' it makes malicious and irresponsible charges against responsible and respected groups and individuals who are working to strengthen and improve our democracy. The league is a personal vehicle of Kamp's which sells its pamphlets at profiteering prices in order to insure a good living for him."

These three pompous patriots have been coy about handing over the names of the dupes who support them. Not us, Cong. Buchanan. Here's the info, chapter and verse:

And here, Cong. Buchanan, is the Rumely outfit income you have been trying to learn: 1943: $315,292; 1944: $447,618; 1945: $367,789; 1946: $465,307; 1947: $425,368; 1948: $399,386.

Why are Cox and Hoffman blocking the investigating committee? Because both have been deeply involved with Kamp. "A Measure of Freedom" on Page 43, states: "The Hoffman-Kamp relationship goes back many years. In 1945 the Michigan legislator admitted that his Congressional office had been used to distribute the League's literature. Since then Kamp has kept in close contact with his friend "on the hill"; a framed, autographed picture of the Congressman was prominently displayed in Kamp's N. Y. h'quarters" . . . Page 44 of the same book reveals Kamp admitted that Cong. Cox was "working for him on members of the Rules Committee."

Take it from here, Congressman Buchanan!

Before You Marry . . .

Sex Standards Seen Key to Picking Mate

This is the second of a series of six articles condensed from the recent book, "Before You Marry," published by Association Press. The author has been a counselor on marriage and family life for more than 20 years. Since 1934 he has been professor of social science and religion at George Williams College, Chicago.

By Sylvanus M. Duvall

CHAPTER TWO

Our age will be known in history as the age which discovered sex.

We discovered it in the sense that the "forty-niners" discovered gold in California. It had always been there.

Discovery is not the same, however, as adequate knowledge.

After Columbus discovered America it took nearly four centuries to explore what he had found.

So it is with sex. Our generation may have discovered it, but the exploration of scientific knowledge has hardly begun.

Neither young people nor old people, nor scientific investigators know very much about it as yet. Even the most extensive and best-known studies only scratch the surface.

Yet despite the limitations of our knowledge, there are some matters related to sex which a couple should consider before they marry. They should make sure that they both have the simpler facts which are important, and that they know what standards of conduct they may expect from each other.

Sex Standards

The sex standards you will expect of each other is one of the most difficult problems engaged couples will face.

First, you should each determine what you want and how important it is to you. Statements from a number of college young people indicate that they prefer to marry virgins, and expect fidelity after marriage. If these are your standards, what are your chances of getting what you want?

For most girls who demand strict standards, the reply must frankly be: Not very good. Recent scientific studies reveal that in certain groups, only one man out of 10 is virgin at the time of marriage. Half of all men commit adultery after marriage. Women are less lax and yet far more so than they once were.

You do not, however, usually select your mate from the "general population." If your selection is from certain groups, your chances of getting the moral standards you wish will be much higher.

Among men who have a high school education, the proportion of virgins is eight times as great, and among college graduates, 16 times as great as among those who have gone through grade school only.

Among active church members, the proportion of virgins is appreciably higher than among non-church groups. The orthodox Jewish group is highest of all.

Those who regard virginity and fidelity as important have a good chance of getting it, if they select from the right groups.

Remember that you are marrying a person, not a statistic.

Purpose of Sex

Do you understand the purpose of sex in human life?

Sex as we know it has resulted from an evolutionary process covering perhaps millions of years. Nature did not develop this just so that we who live today could have fun. The basic purpose was to maintain the human race.

Babies can be and are born outside of marriage. But they are not so born in sufficient numbers to maintain the race.

A thousand housewives will have far more children than a thousand prostitutes. As to the fruitfulness of sex relationships within and outside of marriage, there is no comparison.

Most married couples want and have children. Outside of marriage every effort is made to keep the relationship completely unproductive.

Ask young people this question, "If you marry, do you hope to have children?" With few exceptions, the answer is "Yes." Now ask, "If you were to have sex relationships outside marriage, would you hope to have children?" The almost universal answer is an emphatic "No."

Ask yourself these same questions. For reasons which are easy to understand, in sex relationships outside of marriage, children are the exception. Within marriage, children are the rule.

Sound sex standards are not the inventions of narrow-minded moralists. They arise out of the requirements of nature, and especially, of human nature of which you are a part.

Sex, then, has essential purposes rooted in human survival. The young couple of today will succeed in their marriage only if they have a sound sex code based upon a clear understanding of sex in the long process of human evolution.

For the human race and its survival includes you and your children.

Sexual Compatibility

How important is sexual compatibility in the total marriage relationship?

Young people who seek light at this point are faced with the problem of too much material.

All kinds of pamphlets, books, and other aids are available to help them in the sexual adjustments of marriage, so that the entire subject becomes somewhat confusing.

There does seem to be agreement, however, that the sexual relationships are extremely important to the marriage.

Some marriage counselors go as far as to suggest that sex is the one thing which can make or break a marriage. The implication is that if the sexual adjustment is not satisfactory, it will wreck the whole marriage. If it is satisfactory, nothing else matters very much.

Out of this view grows the great concern for sexual compatibility. Some young people even feel that there should be a trial period of sexual relationships before marriage so that the couple can be sure that they are compatible.

Such views are dangerous nonsense.

Sex is important in marriage, but anyone who knows even a little about the nature of personality and the way in which it develops, understands that there are many points around which it can be organized.

The conception you have of yourself, the roles you play, your value system and your inner adjustments as an individual (to mention a few) are each far more important than sex.

Clinical experience reveals that some couples whose marriages have failed had unusually satisfactory sex relationships right up to the time of their divorces. Other couples go through life and develop unusually successful marriages without ever achieving satisfactory sexual adjustments. That is the conclusion of E. T. Krueger in "A Study of Marriage Incompatibility."

The great danger is that whenever some difficulty arises, the young couple may try to solve it by making some adjustment in their sex relationships.

Such a policy is like trying to cure all kinds of physical ills by keeping your teeth in good condition.

Teeth are important to health, but they are not the only important factors. If we work only with them, we leave untouched the real causes of most of our difficulties.

Likewise, working on the sexual adjustments may leave the real causes untouched and thus the condition becomes worse instead of better.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Has Branch Rickey Ever Been in Radio?

By John Crosby

THE TWO-PART profile in the New Yorker of Branch Rickey, the intellect who controls the destinies of the Brooklyn Dodgers, pretty well confirms my long-standing suspicion that Rickey has perfected the art of selecting and developing ballplayers to the penultimate stage.

Rickey

The Rickey organization starts examining potential ballplayers, from their hocks to their withers, almost from the moment they complete kindergarten. From then on, the process of developing the embryo—his sinews, his instincts, his—if you'll pardon the expression—brain—into the perfect ballplayers is frighteningly efficient. Step by step, the specimen is machined into, say, a second baseman.

The penultimate second baseman, not the ultimate. There is one last step and I don't see how Rickey can long avoid it. That is to breed ballplayers like race horses, crossing a Rizzuto strain with a Pee Wee Reese strain to complete the absolute in shortstops. It may take a while to get accustomed to this idea, but if you'll think about it a bit, you'll discover it is not at all far-fetched. In fact, it is the logical extension of the system into which organized baseball has settled.

Happy Wouldn't Like

PROFESSIONAL baseball has been patterned after horse racing more closely than Happy Chandler would care to admit. The winter sale of ballplayers resembles the Keeneland sale of yearlings more than it resembles any human activity I know of. Then there's the waiving of ballplayers out of the major league. This system has not yet been refined to the fine point the turfmen have reached in their training races but is essentially the same thing, a device to place an exact price on a ballplayer's head. Well, after all, the Jockey Club has been doing this sort of thing a lot longer than organized baseball. Give the boys a chance.

I'm not at all sure that the production of specialized human beings, as opposed to the old-fashioned or generalized human, is a good thing. I can't for the life of me think what useful purpose a second baseman can be put to after he stops playing second base. .I do know that we have traveled in the direction of a specialized human farther than is generally realized.

It is not at all hard to find second- and third-generation doctors and lawyers in any large city. This is one of the consequences of an increasingly urban Nation. Your small town or rural character must by necessity rub elbows with doctors, lawyers, merchants, bakers, policemen—because there are only a few of each. In a big city, though, the son of a doctor may never meet anyone except the sons and daughters of other doctors. His environment and—if this thing goes far enough—eventually, his breeding will fit him only for the medical profession.

Military, Too

NOWHERE is this specialization more apparent than in the Army and Navy, which lead a life almost entirely separate from that of the civilian. There are plenty of sons and grandsons of generals in the Army, not a few of them married to daughters of other generals, and it's hard to see how their children could avoid being either a general or a general's wife.

And in politics we see young Philip Willkie following in the footsteps of Wendell Willkie, not-so-young Robert A. Taft trying to follow William Howard Taft's footsteps all the way to the White House, and an almost endless succession of political Roosevelts.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Some People Insist on Doing Things the Hard Way

M. O. Coleman of 520 7th st. se. bought a thermometer at a local drugstore recently, but found it defective and took it back.

"The mercury has become separated," he explained, "and it doesn't give an accurate reading."

"Okay," said the bored clerk, "so I'll give you another one."

And with that he handed over another thermometer and put the defective one back on the shelf to sell to the next customer.

"What makes people do things like that?" asks District Liner Coleman. And for the life of me I can't figure it out, either.

Whoever gets that defective instrument will blame the drugstore, rather than the manufacturer. Chances are he'll return it, too—and the clerk will have to repeat the same process over again.

Yet all he had to do to protect his store's interests as well as his customer's was to lay the thermometer aside for shipment back to the manufacturer.

I'm reminded of the sign that used to hang in a shop in which I worked. It said:

"Stop. Think. Isn't there a more complicated way of doing it?"

Reporter Mel Altshuler, reading proof over my shoulder, says that the way he heard it, the sign was: "Why be difficult when, with a little more effort, you can be impossible?"

MISCELLANY

Most cheering thing in the papers recently (at least for graybeards like me) was the classified ad: "Salesman for surplus store, young man, 40 years or over" . . . Mrs. E. A. Powers of 5004 43d ave., Hyattsville, Md., tells me that a cash register is greatly needed by the County Thrift Shop, run by the Ladies of Charity of Prince Georges County. They're affiliated with the St. Vincent de Paul Society . . . Eddie Gallaher, Sundial and Moondial spinner at WTOP, was written up recently for his golfing prowess, complete with reference to his having been a pro in his younger days. But I'm not so sure that Eddie is the champ of his own station. Morning Man Mark Evans, no slouch himself, recently fired nine consecutive pars on the front side at Congressional . . . I'll take Mark against Eddie for a side bet of a soda . . . The D. C. Keys barbershop quartet will sing at the twentieth anniversary convention of the Navy Mothers Clubs of America at the Mayflower, 19th through the 23d of this month . . . Another nomination for the best Washington Post carrier boy: Mrs. Lowell C. Adcock of 3601 Connecticut ave. nw. thinks it's Jimmy Hogan who "has a fine personality and gives perfect service" . . . The Stetson & Adams firm at 2152 Florida ave. nw. has the last laugh on us. A reader's curiosity revealed that Stetson & Adams are not hat merchants, but interior decorators. But Bossman Edward E. Adams tells me: "That's true enough, but as a side line, I represent the importers of Anton Pichler Tyrolean hats. I've worn one for 20 years" . . . Leonard Maurer of 1440 Chapin st. nw. says that the modernistic picture at the Dupont positively was not hung upside-down, so there . . . Mark Sheeler, the popular WPIK disk jockey, says he never heard of my column until somebody suggested it as a means of getting a Give-Away kitten. That calls for a cutting reply, but I can't think of anything worse than: Gee, I wish I could say that I had never heard of disk jockeys.

APPROPRIATE?

Henry Petersen of 4310 Garrett Park rd., Kensington, Md., suggests that the word really ought to be spelled "filibluster."

STREET SCENE

Dr. P. T. B. of 3046 Newark st. nw. encountered a strange sight on Rock Creek pkwy. the other 9 a. m. He saw a fellow riding a motorcycle along the road—with a policeman on the back seat. And he can't help but wonder how come?

ADD DEFINITIONS

John Walker Powell of Bachelor's Forest rd., Rockville, Md., suggests:

"A chiropractor is a man who works his fingers to your bone."

I BIT ON IT

I ran into Denny Sartain, WWDC news director, at Rosecroft the other night. "How're ya doing?" I asked.

Denny grinned. "I'm doing fine," he said. "The Sartain system is infallible!"

"Explain yourself," I demanded. "I can't pick a winner."

"The trouble with you," said Denny, "is that you figure too much. You're loaded down with form sheets and handicapper selections and inside dope. Too many figures."

"And you?"

"I just play whatever number strikes my fancy. If I like Number 2, I play Number 2. If I like Number 4, I play Number 4. And if I can't choose between them, I add the two numbers and bet on Number 5."

"You mean Number 6," I interrupted. "Two and four are six."

"There you go," sighed Denny, "figuring again."

Servant's U. S. Job Revealed

By Drew Pearson

It's a peculiar thing about Congressman John S. Wood, the Georgia Democrat whose office took a $1000 fee from a crippled boy for getting a $10,000 compensation bill passed by Congress after the boy was hit by a United States Army truck.

Pearson

The peculiar thing is that financially Wood is well off. As most Congressmen go, he is affluent, and his wife is a member of one of the big textile families of north Georgia.

Yet, on top of the fee from Ralph Stanfield, the Congressman also enjoys a neat arrangement whereby he put his colored servant on the Congressional payroll.

In other words, the servant served in the home of Congressman Wood while paid $50 a week by all the taxpayers. This is a way to solve the servant problem which every housewife would relish.

The servant's name is William Fowler and he has been attached to the Wood family for years. When the Congressman became chairman of the Un-American Activities Committee in July 1945, he promptly shifted Fowler from his personal payroll to the payroll of the committee as a janitor.

Fowler's salary—paid by Uncle Sam—was $191.86 a month, which is not bad pay for a janitor, especially since he spent most of his time at the Wood home rather than at the Capitol. However, he did appear at the committee rooms from time to time.

Fowler stayed on the Un-American Activities Committee payroll until January 4, 1947. This was exactly the date that Congressman Wood ceased to be chairman. The Republicans took over and after that the post of janitor was abolished.

The Republicans apparently felt that a janitor was not necessary, though Parnell Thomas, then chairman, padded the payroll in various other ways and is now in jail.

It is also interesting that Congressman Wood kept his law partner, Carl Tallant, on the Government payroll as his office assistant for $7022.

Even the greenest Congressman knows that it is illegal for a Congressman to take a fee in any case against the Government; nor is his law office supposed to take such a fee if the Congressman is in any way involved.

Most Congressmen separate themselves from their law offices as soon as they are elected, as for instance, Senator McMahon of Connecticut. However, Wood's law partner sits right in the Congressman's office, drawing a $7022 salary from the taxpayers. And enjoying this unique capacity, he exacted a fee of $1000 from crippled Ralph Stanfield, immediately after the latter received his Government compensation.

No wonder Congressman Wood immediately told the boy's father to keep the matter very quiet.

California Crime

One of the most crushing defeats in the history of California politics was administered last week to the Republican attorney general, Fred N. Howser. Not only was he overwhelmingly defeated for the Democratic nomination, but he also ran last for the nomination in his own party.

This was a significant fact in the California crime cleanup. For while Governor Warren has done his best to clean up California's serious crime cancer, he has been powerless to do much because of the fact that his attorney general is independent of the Governor and solely in charge of State law enforcement.

The attorney general race, therefore, was locally almost as important as the race for governor; and here is one backstage factor responsible for Howser's crushing defeat.

Two years ago this commentator called Howser the friend of the gamblers, and described some of his alleged operations with the gamblers. Howser waited about a year and then sued for libel.

Later, when Attorney General Howser's deposition and others were taken, one phase of my charges against him was proved —namely, that he was a friend of the gamblers.

With this part of his libel suit obviously lost, Howser went into court and asked permission to drop this part of his case, and Justice Bolitha Laws of the United States District of Columbia Court, let him get away with it.

However, the fact that Howser had stuck his neck out by claiming he was not the friend of gamblers and then, by withdrawing one part of his suit, was forced to admit, in effect, that he was the friend of gamblers was not lost on the voters of California.

Nomad Prisoners

A heart-rending story of how 106 Jewish refugees, who fled first from the Nazis, then from the Communists, finally landed at Ellis Island, was unfolded to President Truman the other day by Representative Manny Celler of New York.

During the trip they looked out of the train windows at what to them was a land of dreams. They could see the majestic Rockies, the broad prairies, the fertile, well-kept Iowa farmland, the Mississippi, the great industries of the East.

"The tragic thing is that they are so close and yet so far from the one thing they seek—freedom," Celler explained to the President. "Though in the greatest home of liberty, they are still prisoners."

The New York Congressman urged that the 106 nomads be allowed to remain in the United States until his Displaced Persons bill becomes law—after which those who passed a "screening" test would be allowed to make permanent homes here.

Much moved, Truman said: "these people are not sacks of potatoes. They are human beings. We've got to help them."
